Vodka and Whiskey
Four Magic Words
Ideas Work Rapidly
62 and a Star

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1927, by 6tar Co.)

SENATOR TIDINGS of Maryland, back from Russia, says "vodka as a drink excels both Scotch and gin." It might do that easily and still be bad.

The best fact about vodka is that it is sixty per cent. water, only forty per cent. alcohol. Count Wilte, who established a Government monopoly of vodka, said it brought in just enough money to pay the Czar's army.

The Czar abolished vodka for awhile, gave the Russian people a chance to think, and they abolished him.

Mr. Slemp, intelligent student, thinks President Coolidge will run again because, says he, "the President might have said, 'I won't run' instead of saying 'I do not choose to run.'"

Mr. Slemp misunderstands the four magic words, "I do not choose."

Had the President said, "I won't run" his enemies might foolishly say, "you are afraid to run, the third term bogie worries you, or you think you might not get the nomination."

President Coolidge expressed his mind exactly when he said: "I do not choose to run." In those words he said to anybody that can read, "I could be nominated, I could be ELECTED, everybody not a fool knows it, and everybody not a fool knows that there is no question of a third term, since I have been ELECTED President only ONCE. The excellent third term rule is based on the theory that a man should not use the Presidency to get for himself REPEATED ELECTIONS.

"I could be nominated, and elected, by a plurality bigger than the seven millions of last time, but I do not choose to run."

GET AWAY WITH $1,500 IN SOMERVILLE SAFE

Gaining entrance to the plant of the Blewett Baking Co., No. 235 Summer street, West Somerville, through an open window, thieves forced the office safe and obtained $1,500, it was discovered today.

The break was discovered by Walter S. Blewett, president and treasurer of the company, when he arrived at the office this morning. The combination and handle of the safe had been knocked off, the money was missing, and the remainder of the contents strewed about the floor. The robbery took place sometime between Saturday night, when the plant was closed, and today.

Brockton, Sept. 12.—Safecrackers procured $1,500 in cash from a safe in the office of the Producers' Dairy, largest milk concern in this city early today and escaped unseen.

The safe was forced open and no clues were left.

About $5,000 in checks were left behind. These were found strewn all over the office.

John E. Bagg, treasurer of the concern, was summoned from his home. He placed the loss at about $1,500. He said he banked the same amount on Saturday night, and that the lost money represented the Sunday receipts.

Gloves were apparently used by the thieves, police said, as no sign could be found of a fingerprint.

HUGE OIL TANK IN PATH OF FLAMES AS 5 COAL SHEDS ARE DESTROYED

Fire that threatened at any moment to reach more than 20,000 gallons of oil and gas, roared through the plant of the Highland Coal Company at Winchester and Harvard streets, Medford, today.

It destroyed five wooden buildings and 11 automobiles, causing a total loss estimated officially at $38,000.

The Medford fire authorities after calling out all apparatus in their city with three alarms sent calls for help to Arlington and Somerville.

HAMPERED BY WIRES.

The firemen were greatly hampered in their work by the high tension wires on Harvard street, and these became such a menace that the current was finally shut off.

On the other side of the plant they were compelled to lay hose across the Boston & Maine tracks, causing a tie-up on the main line of the Southern division, which continued for nearly an hour.

So intense was the heat that the men could not fight the flames from within the yard, where the wooden buildings and piled coal were on fire, and where there was danger of an oil explosion, but were driven to the roof of the Agar Company's building adjoining the plant.

WORLD FLIERS DEFY 'SUICIDE' WARNINGS

Omura, Japan, Sept. 12 (A.P.)—Edward P. Schlee and William S. Brock, co-pilots of the round-the-world monoplane, "Pride of Detroit," told the Associated Press here today that they firmly expected soon to fly from Japan to Midway Island then to Honolulu and on to San Francisco.

They hope to hop to Tokio tomorrow.

Friends here and in Tokio, as well as many in America, who have cabled appeals, are trying to induce the fliers to proceed to America from Japan by steamship, declaring that the venture by air would be "suicidal."

Brock and Schlee hopped off from Omura at 7:30 o'clock this morning

SWEEPING 'DRY GRAFT' PROBE IS DEMANDED

Washington, Sept. 12 (I.N.S.)—A sweeping congressional inquiry into federal prohibition enforcement was demanded today by Rep. John J. Boylan (D.) of New York.

Basing his demand on charges of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Seymour Lowman, that the dry machine is torn with graft, Boylan proposed to throw the congressional searchlight on every phase of enforcement from 1915 to the present.

"If, after seven years of enforcement by two administrations regarded as favorable to the dry laws, the prohibition machine reeks with bribery and corruption, as Lowman charges, I think the people are entitled to know the facts," Boylan said.

"Congress and the public have a right to know how the executive arm of the government is carrying out all the laws."

With both wets and drys thoroughly aroused by Lowman's indictment of prohibition enforcement, it ap-

BABE RUTH, HELD ON CHARGE OF ASSAULT, PRESENTS AN ALIBI

New York, Sept. 12 (A.P.)—The most widely-known ball player in America was haled into court today on a "John Doe" warrant alleging assault.

George Herman "Babe" Ruth, slugging Yankee outfielder, was the "John Doe" meant.

When he heard the story of the assault, "Babe" expressed pity for the victim, Bernard Neineyer, and produced witnesses to prove that he was in Garfield, NN. J., at the time the assault is alleged to have occurred on Broadway.

Neineyer told the court that on July 4, shortly after he had been released from hospital after being treated for a fracture of the spine he was walking along Broadway near the Alamac Hotel, rendezvous of ball players. Two women passed him, he said, but he paid no attention to them.

ONE DEAD, ONE DYING; MOTORMAN ARRESTED

In an early morning crash that echoed through deserted Chelsea street, Charlestown, an automobile containing four sailors from the Coast Guard craft Conyngham met with terrific impact a fast-traveling Boston Elevated trolley.

One sailor was killed instantly, another is feared to be dying in Haymarket Relief Station, a third was treated there for his injuries, while the fourth was unhurt.

The motorman of the trolley was arrested on the charge of manslaughter, three Boston police officers rid[illegible] on the car blaming him for the crash according to the police of the City square station.

MOTHER KILLS SELF AND HER BOY, 10, BY GAS

Worcester, Sept. 12.—While three other children slept peacefully in the next room and while her husband was on duty in the firehouse across the street, Mrs. Alinda Crosby turned on the gas in the room of her ten-yearold son, Vincent, and crept in bed with him, to die.

The bodies of mother and son were found in the gas-filled room several hours later by Weston Crosby, six-teen, who was awakened by the odor of the gas seeping from the death room into the room where he and his two sisters, Eileen, twelve, and Rhoda, seven, were sleeping.

Weston headed across the street and told his father, Valentine Crosby, a bidderman.

The medical examiner declared Mrs. Crosby, who had been ill for some time, took her own life and that of her son.

Boston Exporter Accused ~ In 'Triangle' Slaying ~ Which Stirs Lithuania

FACES CHARGES

John Roman, graduate of Boston College, accused of shooting chief of Lithuanian Army Medical Corps who, he believed, stole the affections of his wife.

THE BEGINNING

Roman and wife were estranged after he tore letter from her hands.

WIFE OF ACCUSED

Mrs. Roman, formerly Mary Osker of Lawrence, whose husband, believing her too friendly with Colonel Anthony Brundza, shot the army medical man.

THE ENDING

How Roman shot Brundza on beach at Palanzo, Baltic Sea Summer resort.

Sketches by Staff Artist John Maguire

VICTIM IN TRAGEDY

Colonel Anthony Brundza, chief of Lithuanian Medical Corps, shot and killed on the beach by Boston exporter, jealous of attentions to his wife.

ROMAN AND WIFE IN REUNION ON DATE OF SLAYING

The farewell of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Roman to their six-year-old boy, which was followed within five hours by Roman's killing of Colonel Anthony Brundza of the Lithuanian army, supposed clandestine suitor of Mrs. Roman, was described today by a Norwood youth who brought the boy to this country.

Charles Weisu

Having patched up their quarrel temporarily for the sake of their boy, the Boston couple went together to the dock at Memel, Lithuania, and bid from friends and son alike the difference that were to end so soon in tragedy.

Roman, head of a Boston exporting concern, and one of the wealthiest Americans in Kovno, the Lithuanian capital, is now facing trial for the slaying of Col. Brundza, who was chief of the medical corps of the Lithuanian army.

BOY WITH GRANDMA.

The boy, brought to this country on the liner Estonia by Charles Weisul of Norwood, National President of the Knights of Lithuania, was met in New York by Roman's sister, and is now with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Roman, in Newton Center.

"No one suspected that there was serious trouble between Mr. and Mrs. Roman," said Weisul today. "Roman was in good spirits at the dock, although sorrowful at seeing his boy leave. Mrs. Roman was in tears but I thought it was because of the leave-taking, nothing more.

"They had a government motor launch in which they followed the liner for a distance toward the sea after we left the dock. We sailed at 8 in the morning. The shooting, which we learned about at Danzig, our first stop, occurred at 2 o'clock that same afternoon.

"We stayed four days ooaling at Danzig and passengers came aboard there and talked of the shooting. They had seen the impressive funeral for the dead colonel.

"I cautioned these passengers to keep quiet because the boy was there, but they said, 'Oh, well, even if he has heard us, it's all right, because the shooting was in self-defense.'

ROMANS RICH; WIFE PRETTY.

"Little by little, I got the subject before the boy in a different light and I do not believe he knows now that his father killed the army officer.

"Roman occupied a high position in Lithuania. He is very wealthy and his wife is pretty. He has many business interests which occupied his attention at Kovno, while Mrs. Roman was spending the Summer at their fashionable villa at Palanga, 180 miles away.

"With friends I visited Roman at his pretentious home in Kovno and learned at that time that his wife was at the seashore, but none of us heard anything to make us think there was trouble between them. The boy was at Palanga with her.

"Besides being foreign representative of American concerns and head of the largest automobile business in Lithuania, Roman was president of the International Bank, of which President Smetona of Lithuania is vice-president.

"My father and his father were old friends, but I was very much surprised on the day the boat sailed to have Roman bring his son to me and ask me to bring him to America. Of curse the explanation was simple. The Romans said they wanted the boy to go to school in America, and so I had no suspicion that anything was wrong."

1 DEAD, 1 DYING

The police of the City square station, after making the arrest of the motorman, Edward Maher, on the charge of the policemen riding on his car, were busy attempting to check up on the details.

Maher pleaded not guilty to manslaughter when arraigned in Charlestown District Court today. He was held in $1000 for hearing September 22.

Motorman Maher lives at No. 201 East Eagle street, East Boston. The automobile used by the sailors is owned by a Revere woman.

FACES FREE STATE BAN

MRS. MAUDE GONNE McBRIDE

Widow of Irish Republican leader who was executed after Easter rebellion of 1916 faces deportation, says Dublin dispatch. Her son is held in connection with the slaying of Kevin O'Higgins.

FREE STATE OF ERIN TO EXILE MAUD GONNE

Dublin, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—It is rumored here that among those marked for deportation from the Irish Free State under the public safety act are Mrs. Maud Gonne McBride—whose son was detained for further investigation on a charge of conspiracy in the investigation into the murder of Kevin O'Higgins — and Mrs. Despard, a sister of the late Lord French of Ypres, who lives and works with Mrs. McBride.

Mrs. Maude Gonne McBride, widow of Major McBride, who was executed in the Easter rebellion of 1916, has long been identified with the Republican movement in Ireland. She was arrested at various times for her activities.

SON HELD IN SLAYING.

Mrs. Charlotte Despard, Mrs. McBride's companion, is a widely known Woman Suffragist and has also been an active worker in the Irish Republican movement.

Sean McBride, son of Mrs. McBride, was arraigned in the Dublin Police Court on August 25 on suspicion of being engaged in the conspiracy to assassinate Vice-President O'Higgins. He was remanded at that time.

De Valera declares he is prepared to accept existing realities and prove hard-headed common sense is not incompatible with true national ideals. A nation cannot march on an empty stomach, he asserted.

He declared that if his party, the Fianna Fail, were returned to power, it would proceed as a responsible constitutional government consulting the people before any important steps were taken, adding: "Our first and most strenuous effort must be devoted to repairing the present economic ruin."

DRAGS U. S. ROW INTO LEAGUE SESSION

Geneva, Sept. 12 (A.P.)—Panama's public presentation to the League of Nations Assembly of the details of her dispute with the United States concerning the sovereignty of the canal zone has caused something of a sensation here.

It has created the impression that the Latin-American countries will not only sir at Geneva political problems arising among themselves, but also those which directly affect the United States.

Panama appealed to the United States to accord her satisfaction in her claim that complete sovereignty over the canal belt has not been abandoned by cession of special administrative rights there, but it is remarked here that she made this appeal through the medium of the League.

Addressing the assembly, Dr. Ecsehio Morales, Panaman Foreign Minister, emphasized that the canal is essential to world trade. He said it was Panama's "obvigus and imperative international duty to permit this natural right of way to be used on a footing of absolute equality by all nations without hindrance or obstruction."

He suggested that the sovereignty dispute with America be submitted to an impartial court of justice, by which it was inferred he meant the World Court.

Girls All Synthetic in This Age, Even Their Breaths

"We are living in a synthetic age," said Charles F. Abbott, executive director of the American Institute of Steel Construction, today at the National Business Conference at Babson Park.

"Observe almost any young woman of the present generation. She wears sandals of synthetic snake skin, synthetic stockings, dress and underwear, synthetic complexion, synthetic coloring in her hair, synthetic hat, synthetic perfume, and possibly, a synthetic breath."

GIRL FINDS JOB IN SHOP BETTER THAN CABARETS

New York, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—Jane Weaver, twenty, bobbed brunette, is convinced that a job in a Cleveland cereal factory is better than a career in the cabaret night life of the roaring forties. On Riverside drive a policeman found her in a state of collapse because she had not eaten enough in her one week's career as a dancer. A magistrate took up a collection to send her back home.

LAKE BOAT CAPTAIN, 97, READY FOR NEXT SEASON

St. Albans, Vt., Sept. 12 (A.P.).—Captain Eli R. Rockwell does not know the meaning of old age. At 97 he returned to his home here today after completing his 82nd season of work on Lake Champlain vessels, and almost as spry as the youngest sailor on the lake he said he was looking forward to another year in command of the steamer Vermont.

Starting his career as a lake sailor when a boy he has never missed a season. No one has disputed his claims to being the oldest active steamboat captain in the world. He remarked today that during the daily trips of his steamer all Summer he had never missed a meal.

Nearly Frozen on Forced Flight

Hadley Airport, New Brunswick, N. J., Sept. 12.—A seventeen-year-old Hackensack boy rode here from Teterborough airport at Hasbrouck Heights on the tail of an aeroplane.

He didn't ask for the ride, and didn't want it. And the pilot of the plane, L. Fonton De Arce of the Air Mail Service, didn't know the lad was there, although he did notice that the plane was not balancing properly.

The boy is Vincent Taylor of Hackensack. He is a would-be flier himself, and has been up a few times. He "hangs around" the airport at Teterborough all his spare time. He was there when De Arce was preparing to take off for Hadley Field from where he is to fly to Boston with the mail.

COULDN'T LET GO

De Arce was in the cockpit, and the engine was going, but the plane was not pointing into the wind, so he called out to the youth, who was standing nearby:

"Will you swing my tail around, sonnie?"

Young Taylor grasped the handles on the tail and swung the ship around. The plane started forward over the field. By the time Taylor was able to extricate his hand he found himself up in the air, riding on the tail.

He continued to go up; up 3,0[illegible] feet.

NOT REALLY SCARED

"I wasn't really scared," he said later, "but it was terribly cold. It was so cold holding on that I had to take one hand off every now and then and bang it against the plane to restore the feeling. I was numb all over. I kept changing hands that way all through the trip."

The ride lasted 25 minutes.

"Once I saw a shooting star," Taylor said. "That made me feel kind of funny for a minute. I'd always heard that somebody died whenever a shooting star fell.

HUB TOURISTS RETURN FROM EUROPE

Stricken in the immigration room at Commonwealth Pier a few minutes after the Hamburg-American liner Westphalia docked with passengers from Hamburg and Queenstown today, Miss Mary B. Dwyer, 17-year-old colleen of Bishopwood, Tipperary, was rushed to the Carney Hospital, South Boston, suffering from an acute case of appendicitis.

Miss Dwyer was about to be examined for admittance to the country before going to the home of her uncle, William Dwyer of Providence.

The Westphalia docked with 83 cabin and 117 third class passengers for this port. Among the returning Boston vacationists were Dr. and Mrs. Frederic Parker, Jr. Dr. Parker is a pathologist at the Boston City Hospital. Another party of Bostonians on the trip were Mrs. Selma Munsterberg, with the Misses Ella and Margaret Munsterberg, widow and daughters of the late Hugo Munsterberg, professor of psychology at Harvard.

Two chums, playmates in Ireland since childhood, parted their ways here when each visited this country for the first time, en route, however, to different cities. They were Miss Marcella Earls, who will shape her destinies in the Hub, and Rita Healy, who continues on to New York. Miss Earls left the pier for the home of her aunt at No. 426 Newbury street.

Kearney, only partly conscious, was found crumpled in bushes by Harry Wilson, newsboy, of Johnson street.

The boy summoned Policemen Stringer and Fournier who raced the injured man to the hospital.

REUNITED THROUGH AD

PET IS RECOVERED
Through a Boston Evening American classified advertisement, Gertrude Lang, prima donna of "Half a Widow" company which closed its Boston engagement Saturday, recovered her pet dog which was lost. The pet wandered out into the heart of the city and was lost. Inconsolable Miss Lang then advertised in the Boston Evening American.

SAFE HIGHWAYS DRIVE OPENS IN STATE

beginning the prodigious task of inspecting vital parts of machines—brakes, lights, steering gears and horns—free of charge.

Representing the Massachusetts Safety Council and the Governor's committee on Street and Highway Safety, Connelly detailed the work of organization of cities and towns for the drive during the past year.

OVERLOOK DISABILITY CURES.

He asserted that his committee found scores of local communities where the residents believed themselves to be in no danger of highway hazard, although the community leaders themselves were fully conscious of the problem.

"These residents," he said, "look upon others as living in dangerous localities and believe themselves more or less immune. It is to make this safety drive State-wide and not limited to a score of cities, that the campaign has been organized.

"I believe that many of us have fallen into the error of measuring our highway hazard in terms of fatal accidents only, and overlooking the fact that the total disability resulting from the non-fatal accidents, has become an enormous economic loss.

"Population bears little relation to this hazard as compared with the volume of motor traffic passing through the area.

ACCIDENTS FOLLOW TRAFFIC.

In other words, there are towns of small population and limited police force that have the accident exposure of cities and there are certain cities in which, because of traffic volume, twice as many pedestrians are run down as in other communities having the same population."

Other speakers at the luncheon were Marcus Dow, traffic expert of New York; Lieut.-Gov. Frank G. Allen, Col. Eben S. Draper, toastmaster, and Carl P. Dennett.

In addition, there were at the head table, Commissioner of Public Safety Gen. Alfred Foote, Public Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson, Deputy Commissioner Thomas F. Goode, Major Charles T. Harding, Capt. A. W. Clark, Eben S. Draper, John J. O'Callaghan, Miner H. Paddock, Thomas J. Hurley, A. H. Marchant, Robert Lincoln O'Brien and the Rev. E. Talmadge Root.

TWO WEEKS' DRIVE.

The drive will last two weeks, during which time "jaywalkers' conferences" are scheduled on Boston Common and at other gathering places in the State.

The chief feature of the campaign will be on the closing Saturday of the drive, when a huge parade, with several thousand children participating, will wind through the business section of the city.

In its current issue of its official publication, the Boston Chamber of Commerce today urged co-operation on the part of business men and their employes.

"As an individual, you can add yourself as one more person who resolves to use our highways more carefully this week, next week and for all time," the Chamber publication said.

SWEEPING 'DRY GRAFT' PROBE IS DEMANDED

peared Boylan would have strong support for his investigation.

A distinguished group of officials and ex-prohibition executives would be summoned under Boylan's plan, including:

Secretary Mellon and Undersecretary Ogden L. Mills, Lowman and his cousin and predecessor, General Lincoln C. Andrews; Roy C. Haynes, who was let out by the administration; Major Walton Greene, former chief investigator; A. Bruce Bielaski New York investigator, intimately connected with undercover operations against smugglers; Joseph C. Waddell, ex-alcohol and beer supervisor, and Mable Walker Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney-General.

Boylan believes unbelievable conditions of graft and corruption will be uncovered. He feels that Lowman "hasn't told half the story."

Boston Dry Office Gets Charge Over Connecticut

Washington, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—The prohibition enforcement district of Connecticut, which heretofore has operated under direction of the New York office, has been ordered under the supervision of the Boston office after Oct. 1.

Assistant Secretary Lowman said the transfer was made in an effort to improve enforcement conditions in Connecticut and relieve the New York office so it might devote all of its attention to its own problem.

Frank T. Putney, deputy administrator at Hartford, will be in charge of the Connecticut area, with 17 agents. The transfer will not affect the number of agents in New York City.

The Boston office has supervision of the New England States, while the New York office will devote its attention to the southern and eastern judicial districts of New York.

Lowman revealed that the agents from New York had not got on as well with the New Englanders as was desired, and that friction between the residents and enforcement agents had partially prompted the transfer.

MISSING CHICAGO BOY FOUND DEAD IN ICE BOX

Chicago, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—A search for 5-year-old Willie Weber, missing since Saturday, today resulted in finding his smothered body in an old icebox at his home.

The body was found in a sitting position in the lower compartment, knees drawn up under the chin and arms clasped about them. Children of the neighborhood are being questioned to learn if any of them locked him in the ice box.

MAYOR WALKER AND WIFE LEAVE ROME FOR PARIS

Rome, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—Mayor James J. Walker of New York, Mrs. Walker and their party left for Paris today on the De Luxe Express. About 100 friends, officials and members of the American colony cheered the departing visitors at the station.

FATHER OF ACTRESS DIES AFTER "DEATH WISH"

Los Angeles, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—An altercation between Miss Carol Gilbert, who plays "mother" parts on the stage and screen, and her father, Charles Mortimer Gilbert, over the cooking of a plate of beans, followed by a "death wish" by the daughter, was climaxed here by the sudden death of the 80-year-old man.

Miss Gilbert told the police that in the argument her father struck her in the face with his cane. "I wish you were dead," Miss Gilbert said she exclaimed. The aged man, she said, clutched his heart and fell to the floor.

CHAPLIN'S WIFE MAY TRY STAGE TO 'FORGET'

voting her life to the upbringing of her kiddies?

Both careers beckon. Mrs. Chaplin is very much undecided.

"My children mean everything to me," she said.

And in the next breath: "I've always loved the stage."

Theatrical promoters are falling over themselves vieing for her services. Even the famous "Glorifier of the American Girl," Florenz Ziegfeld, is interested.

Ziegfeld said today:

"The day to commercialize unpleasant notoriety died with the Hammerstein music hall. However, I am always ready to engage ability and stage talent for its real worth.

"I will give Charlie Chaplin $1,000,000 and the former Mrs. Chaplin whatever her talents warrant."

Mrs. Chaplin is only eighteen, the age of the average Ziegfeld girl, and she is very pretty.

She doesn't have to work for a living, of course, having obtained a settlement of $825,000 when she got a divorce from the famous film comedian recently.

SCORNS BIG OFFERS

Before she left Los Angeles she was offered $7,500 a week to appear in vaudeville on the Pacific coast, but declined. Since she arrived in New York she has received several offers, one from big-time vaudeville.

"I honestly don't know what I shall do," she said. "I want first of all to get a good rest. I plan to stay in New York two months. I've never been here before and I want to see the sights.

"I am going to look into the theatrical offers. You know my experience in the films has been limited and I never had a try at the legitimate stage. I'm undecided what to do, but no matter what I decide, my children will be uppermost in my mind."

Race of Supermen Is Promised by Gland Expert

Budapest, [illegible]ngary, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—Dr. Serge Voronoff, noted gland expert, at the zoological congress, announced a greatly increased production of wool from sheep through the transplantation of glands.

"The mother who is the first to hand me her child for a rejuvenation operation perhaps would be the founder of a new and mighty human race," he said.

"Give me children endowed with the spark of genius," said Dr. Voronoff, "and I will breed a new race of supermen."

"Between 50 and 60 is the best age for males to undergo rejuvenation, but females in this respect show greater wisdom, not waiting for the time when the constitution only reacts with difficulty on implanted glands."

of the Medford police did yeoman work in saving four horses from a burning barn. They dashed into the flames to the dismay of the crowds drawn by the spectacular blaze, and after six minutes, when they feared they had gone to their deaths, they reappeared each leading two horses.

J. R. Hubbard, owner of the plant, said the place was almost a total loss, but praised the efforts of the Medford firemen.

1,250,000 PUPILS IN NEW YORK SCHOOLS

New York, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—New York youth forgot the old swimming hole and other vacation joys and plunged into the school year today—1,250,000 strong.

Officially estimated, the attendance at the city's seats of learning will be 1,025,709, but there are at least 75,000, who will have to catch their three "Rs" in triple sessions. Parochial and private schools will take care of the rest.

British Plane Crashes

London, Sept. 12 (A.P.)—The Air Ministry has received news that the British seaplane Crusader entered in the Schneider Cup races crashed near Venice today. Flying Officer H. M. Schofield was injured.

WOULD BEAT "JOY-RIDING" DAUGHTER, SAYS PRIEST

Springfield, Sept. 12.—Declaring that if any daughter of his entered the automobile of a male stranger, he would "beat her black and blue," the Rev. George S. L. Connor of St. Michael's Cathedral warned fathers of the perils of neglect.

Blame he placed on the shoulders of fathers who proceed on the theory that girls' upbringing should be supervised by the mother.

"It's the fathers' duty to look after their daughters," he said. "The father who goes to bed and sleeps soundly at night, not knowing what one, two or three of his daughters may be doing, or even where they are, is guilty of carelessness in a high degree.

"If those fathers could only know what the priests know and what the police know, they would quickly adopt a more solicitous attitude toward their daughters.

"If I were in the place of a father and my daughter entered an automobile with a man not a relative or not thoroughly known to me, I would beat that daughter black and blue, if it became necessary by so doing to save her from her own willfulness."

James J. Corbett says, "Faversham's advice decided me on Luckies"

Famous former heavyweight champion, with Mrs. Corbett after breakfast at their home at Bayside, L. I., recommends Lucky Strikes.

William Faversham,
The Popular Actor,
writes:

"For years I have been a Lucky Strike enthusiast, in fact, I never smoke any other cigarette. In all this time I have never been troubled with throat irritations. In addition to the enjoyment that I get from the superior quality of Lucky Strikes, it is wonderful to know that my voice will never be affected by smoking."

William Faversham

You, too, will find that Lucky Strikes are mild and mellow—the finest cigarettes you ever smoked, made of the finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos, properly aged and blended with great skill, and there is an extra process—"It's toasted"—no harshness, not a bit of bite.

BETTY ALDEN'S SOCIETY COMMENT

Members of Smart Set Returning From Abroad on Every Liner

SAILING HOMEWARD AGAIN come the travelers from foreign parts. From every steamship that noses into dock they come tripping down the gangplank, brimful of gaiety and reminiscence of the Summer's globe-trotting, and zestful for the Autumn's social schedule—whether it be weddings, studies, debuts or philanthropies. Some of the itinerant smart set are already arrived. Some are on the high seas. And some have still to embark—but the tide is turning this way with a rush.

THE FRANCIS GRAYS ARE already in town, going immediately to their town house in Commonwealth avenue. That is, Mr. and Mrs. Gray and the school-girl daughter, Miss Edith may be found at that address while Miss Marie Louise Gray dashed over to Long Island, to be a guest of friends there and take in the International polo. The Grays went over on the Samaria in June to do a foreign tour as the climax for Miss Marie Louise Gray's coming out season. Miss Edith is still in the school age and does not come out for several years.

MR. AND MRS. TIMOTHEE ADAMOWSKI are on this side again after their usual Summer spent among old world haunts with friends in musical and artistic circles. To journey away to the Continent is the regular Summer-time procedure for the Adamowskis, and has been for many a year. Having an abiding interest in the Soldiers' Shop, Mrs. Adamowski will turn at once to this, her philanthropy, where she serves each morning with faithful regularity.

SCHOOL AND COLLEGE OPENING is the reason that brings the Hugh D. Scott family back home. They will be again at their place in Wellesley sometime late in September after a Summer of European travel. Mr. and Mrs. Scott, Miss Helen Scott, and two sons, Richard and Robert Scott went over in the June migration when the smart world in such great numbers departed.

MISS ALICE LONGFELLOW OF Cambridge belongs in the category of those still lingering awhile abroad. Miss Longfellow will not be back in her famous ancestral mansion in Cambridge until the brightened leaves have turned to mellow brown and have come fluttering down to make a crisp carpet. Miss Longfellow, with her two nieces, the Misses Erica and Anne Thorpe, went over early in the Summer aboard the Blancamano.

THE TIME OF THE "SERE and yellow leaf" will find Mrs. John B. Swann of Milton and Boston back on home shores again. Mrs. Swann is making a long season of it abroad, with her two lively young daughters, Miss Helen and Miss Marguerite Swann, to keep her company. The Swanns' European crossing was aboard the liner Paris, which, also, took over the Philip Dalton family, who are likewise Miltonians.

FATHER OF 6 DIES BY GAS IN SPRINGFIELD

Springfield, Sept. 12.—Moris Mushnitsky, 48, of Massasoit street, committed suicide today by inhaling illuminating gas in the shop of his employer, a main street tailor.

Police used a pulmotor without success.

Mushnitsky, who had a wife and six children, left home two hours earlier than usual. He received good pay, according to his employer, and no reason could be ascribed for his act.

NEW PLANS DIRECT FROM GOD, SAYS DR. STRATON

New York, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—Plans which he says had divine inspiration for a thirty-five-story combination skyscraper church and office building were regarded today by the Rev. John Roach Straton as the basis for a new peace in Calvary Baptist Church.

The idea came to him directly from God, Dr. Straton said he believed, "while praying a few nights ago between 3 and 4 o'clock." The pastor submitted his plan before his congregation on his return from a vacation devoted to "much prayer, meditation and Bible study," during which he had determined to "turn away from the past" and forgive "those who have made trouble here."

The new church project was proposed in substitution for the pastor's proposal for erection of a skyscraper church and apartment building for which the pastor had long battled with factions of his congregation.

MOVIE SITE DISPUTE BACKED BY SHOTGUNS

Cedar City, Utah, Sept. 12 (A.P.)—A dispute over a site in the mountains near here occupied by a First National picture company and which a United Artists company threatened to take by force, has ended in withdrawal of the latter and the selection of other locations.

The defenders were armed with shotguns loaded with rock salt and maintained their position for three days, while the sheriff assisted in negotiations.

'GUILLOTINED' ON R. R. TRACK

Worcester, Sept. 12.—An unidentified man, about thirty-five years old, committed suicide today one-eighth of a mile west of Millbury Junction by allowing a Boston & Albany train to cut his head off almost as neatly as if done by a surgeon. For this reason, and because no other mark appeared on the body, the medical examiner declared the man had placed his neck on the rail to be "guillotined."

LONDON TERRIFIED BY HUGE HOLES UNDER CITY

London, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—London has discovered that its house is built upon sand, and is shivering in consequence. Not since the German air raids of ten years ago has there been such trepidation over the possibility of catastrophe.

In the last few weeks a half-dozen buildings in various parts of the city have crumbled and fallen to the ground, great holes have opening in the streets, and a tremendous cavity was found beneath Piccadilly, which is in course of reconstruction.

A joint committee meeting has been called between the Royal Institute of British Architects and the Federation of Building Trades Employers to discuss the stability of London. The National Physical Laboratory is studing the effects of vibration on buildings.

The collapse of large structures—one a seven-story office building in Cornhill street, across from the Bank of England—and the opening of huge holes in the streets, have revealed the fact that London is built on a shifting foundation.

The top 30 feet of London's surface ground is composed of shifting strata in which endless subterranean burrowing has gone on and on.

3 HURT AS GIRL TRIES TO DRIVE

Hyannis, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—Three women were injured, one seriously, when an automobile in which Miss Helen Durgan, Chatham, was taking a driven lesson, mounted a sidewalk on Chatham boulevard and struck the Misses Ellen Fitzgerald, 27; Lucy Plimpton, 55, and Julia Cleary, 45, all of Chatham.

Miss Fitzgerald, who was pinned against a fence by the machine, is on the danger list at the Cape Cod Hospital. Her companions, although painfully hurt, will recover.

John Goossen, 35, of Chatham, under whose license Miss Durgan was driving, is being held pending investigation.

WOMAN FATALLY HURT IN STOVE POLISH BLAST

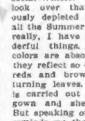
Dearest Anne—

Vacation time is over once more and back we go to the office, the home or the heavy social Winter. But first we must look over that wardrobe seriously depleted I'm sure through all the Summer good times. And really, I have found some wonderful things. The new Fall colors are absolutely bewitching, they reflect so cleverly the warm reds and browns and golds of turning leaves. And each color is carried out faithfully in hat, gown and sheer silk stocking. But speaking of stockings, Anne, reminds me that you must—

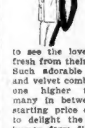
Be Holeproof Groomed!

There may be some doubt in the matter of husbands, but in the matter of hosiery, every girl is certain of her grooming when she selects Holeproof Hosiery at Talbot's, 395 Washington Street—long h eadquarters for these famous stockings. Hosiery, the all-important link in ensembles, must conform closely to the mode. Whenever a new style trend is seen, Holeproof Hosiery is at once color-styled in the new shades created and ever here be t that master artist, Lucille, of Paris. The up-to-date girl makes sure of the color correctness of her ensemble by using the portfolio of Lucille Color Combinations that you'll find on the Hosiery Counter at Talbot's. Just inside the door. These lovely Lucille colors, added to the well-known superiority of Holeproof Hosiery, combine to make these stockings even more desirable. $1.00, $1.50 and $1.95, in service or chiffon weights.



The Last Word

In fashion for the first day in school is jersey. No campus wardrobe is complete without one or two jersey frocks. Ideal for street or office wear, too. I saw some little beauties in Evelyn's for only $15.95—snappy little models in all the newest shades. Adel, oh! Anne, I do want you to see the lovely, delightful frocks fresh from their New York boxes. Such adorable satins, gorgettes and velvet combinations—and no one higher than $18.95—and many in between that and the starting price of $5.95. Dresses to delight the eye and fit the human form divinely. Advanced in style, slender in line, expertly fitted and finished in all the new blues, tans, greens, rosewood shades and scarlets. At Evelyn's, 3d Floor, 7 White, where a little money buys so much.



Are You Satisfied

With your looks, or do you envy others their superior smartness? It's her bob that sets a girl apart from the thousands of indifferently groomed women, if she gets it from Mr. Trocolli, at the Hollywood Bobbing Shop, 3rd floor, New Studio Bldg., 110 Tremont St. (Con. 6432). Mr. Trocolli is a master of the Parisian method of clipping, molding, shaping and trimming a girl's hair into a silky mass of sheer beauty. Let him study your head, your profile. No matter what your age or type, Mr. Trocolli will create for perfect bob for you. And complete it with "the world's greatest haircut" or that perfect Neatle Circuline permanent that's now a year 'round necessity. Available until Sept. 15 at the Hollywood's reduced rate of $10.

Impossible on a small income? No indeed. Simply go up to Parker Bros., 3rd Floor, New Studio Bldg., 110 Tremont St., and select what pleases you from their stock of snappy frocks and stunning fur coats that Mr. Parker has just brought back from New York. Then divide the price by ten, according to the Parker Bros. convenient budget system. You won't miss the few dollars each month as you would a lump sum. And oh, the heavenly satisfaction of owning the lovely clothes you've longed for—of being just as smartly dressed as the girls you have envied. At Parker Bros.' darling dresses start at $15.00 up to $27.50. Satins, crepes, transparent velvet and georgette combinations. She Walks in Beauty

Who walks in "Beacon Hill" shoes. Countless women now enjoy the luxury of being correctly shod, because they realize that foot style needn't mean foot expense. The Parisians, you know, arbiters of fashion, always pay particular attention to having the feet well groomed. You stunning can't feel smartly turned out if your shoes are not just right. And now comes the joy of knowing that you can dress your feet well and at the same time inexpensively. As a fitting complement to your smartest gowns, the "Beacon Hill" shoe is unsurpassed. For strolling over the links, for afternoons at bridge, or for the inevitable formal party—there is a "Beacon Hill" shoe for each occasion. And no matter how hard you are to suit you are sure to find just the shoe you desire. Years of selling and suiting the women of New England have taught Houghton & Dutton Co. just what women want in shoes—good looks, quality, economy. Turn Back The Pages

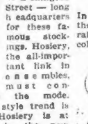
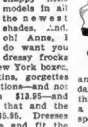
In your book of memories to your earliest school days—especially the rainy days. Did you strut forth proudly in your own precious rainy day accoutrements—snappy rain cape or coat and bright-colored umbrella, or did you sig-zag along under a dingy black relic, discarded by some grown-up? I'll never forget the joy I took in my first scarlet umbrella—nor the endless days of sunshine between the day Dad brought it home and the day I proudly bore it over my head to catch the long hoped-for drops. Surely every child should enjoy these simple pleasures. Especially when the most adorable umbrellas I've ever seen for children are selling at Filene's for just $1.85. In the jolliest plaids—with amber tips and ends. Six strong ribs, decorated handle with carrying cord, just like mother's, built around a sturdy steel rod that will weather any gale. It's hard for me to decide which was the gayest, the scarlet plaids or the blues or greens—but they tell me the greens are the most popular. Personally, I've still a yearning for scarlet. Or they come in plain blue, green or red if preferred.



Filene's won't have to be coaxed to carry these beauties. Nor can you afford to be reckless in the dangerous dampness when protection comes so reasonably. Just $1.65 for these clever kiddies' umbrellas at Filene's, on the first floor. Grown-up umbrellas at equally attractive prices, too.

Men Like Holeproof

Anne, and John needs stockings. He adds them on his travels as we used to hair pins. But, praise be, there are plenty more where they came from at Talbot's. Boston's popular men's store. He adquarters for years for Holeproof hosiery. John simply won't wear anything else, which means no darning for me. It's the Ex Toe that's converting over 3,000 men a year to the Holeproof habit. A special wear-resisting thread is used at the toe and over the top so skillfully that you can scarcely see where it begins or ends. No noticeable thickness, but the wear is tripled and quadrupled. Add to this the trim fit and superior workmanship of Holeproof and you have a sock that can't be equalled. In finest cottons, 35c, 3 pr. for $1.00, in the newest shades. Lisle, 50c; silk with lisle top and feet, 75c, 3 for $2.15; heavy silk, full-fashioned, $1.00. Real investments in service and satisfaction.

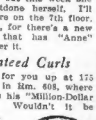


Fashion's Spotlight

Is focused on velvets, georgettes, and satins—and such a wonderful collection of brand new dresses in these wanted materials at Florence Daniels' dress shop, 61 Winter St.! Gorgeous lustrous satins with every new style detail—skirts rippling into circular side flares, new tiers and pleats, graceful, uneven hem lines, and the georgette and velvet combinations, and the crepes! The price? You'll never believe that they are only $18.50—these Frenchy frocks that seem to cry "Expensive!" Of course we should be used to finding the newest and loveliest frocks at the most reasonable prices, at Florence Daniels', but this week she has truly outdone herself. I'll meet you there on the 7th floor, 61 Winter St., for there's a new pata velvet that has "Anne" written all over it.

Guaranteed Curls

Are waiting for you up at 175 Tremont St., in Rm. 608, where Warren gives his "Million-Dollar Permanents." Wouldn't it be worth a million to have straight, stringy hair transformed into soft, natural waves through a Warren permanent? And to have Mr. Warren keep this wave in perfect condition for one year? After you've enjoyed the beauty and comfort of your perfect permanent for five months, you go back to Mr. Warren and he recorrects your wave so that it's as lovely as the first day—and for seven long months to come. $10.00, Anne, and no extras of any kind.



Even Sensitive Feet

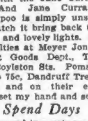
Feel an inner urge to be smartly shod. In Dr. Saul's shoes you have the bracing support and soft cushioned ease of a health shoe with all the lightness, smartness and buoyancy of the invisible built-in arch support. So light that it makes no noticeable difference in weight or appearance, yet so strong that the under arch never sags. Truly one's feet feel winged when smartly shod in Dr. Saul's shoes. $8.00, in the latest Fall modes in calf, patent, satin or suede. Remember, if all is not right with your feet, Dr. Saul's scientific treatments will quickly put them in normal, healthy condition. This competent podiatric chiropodist is in the New Studio Building, you know at 110 Tremont St., Rm. 312.

Names Pre-eminent

In business and social circles appear among the patronesses of my favorite line of Jane Curran's preparations for the hair. I'm particularly partial to her Tonic for Falling Hair and Dry Scalp. Nourishes hair roots, stimulates circulation. Hair ceases falling and new growth is induced. $1.50. And worth its weight in gold is her Tonic for Dandruff and Scalp Irritation. If your hair is coming out or you wish a heavier growth, alternate the tonic with the Jane Curran Pomade. And Jane Curran's Tonic Shampoo is simply unsurpassed. Watch it bring back the lustre, color and lovely lights. All these specialties at Meyer Jonson's Toilet Goods Dept., Tremont and Boylston Sts. Pomade $1, Shampoo 75c, Dandruff Treatment $1.50, and on their efficiency I do set my hand and seal.

Why Spend Days

Tramping around in a vain search for the hat of your dreams at a price within your reach when the answer to your problem is right up on the 4th floor of the New Studio Bldg., at 110 Tremont St.? Here in Audrey's you will find beautiful one-of-a-kind models in newest Fall shades and shapes in sizes for every head. Audrey was just finishing a large Panne velvet hat for a customer sailing for France this week when I dropped in. This customer, a world-wide traveller, says Paris offers nothing smarter than an Audrey hat.



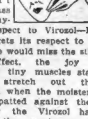
And at Audrey's, you know, you may have a velvet or satin hat made right on your head, just as felt or velour hoods are molded. Do take this as a personal introduction to Audrey, Anne, and make the most of the acquaintance.

Do Drop in

At 25 Huntington Avenue and see the new Fall frocks and coats Leo Pass has so carefully selected in New York. I was there this morning and found four friends of mine opening accounts with Mr Pass! They seemed so happy to find "different" dresses of better grade at rock-bottom prices, on the budget plan. At Leo Pass, you know, you pay 1-3 down, the balance in small amounts at your leisure. And his prices are really lower than in many cash shops. Even the $15.00 dresses—and he has a large stock—are smartly different from the usual inexpensive dresses. Dinner dresses in cut velvets, satins or georgettes, sleeveless or with extra sleeves, smart day time frocks, really $25 values, and exclusive models in imported materials at most any price you care to pay. Huntington Ave. cars stop right at the door. You're really missing an opportunity to buy at sharp savings if you fail to open an account here.

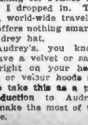
Let Uncle Sam

Bring beauty to you in his mail bag. Don't tolerate sluggish skin, wrinkles, and blemishes just because you can't get in town regularly for beauty treatments. Drop a line to Wanda's toiletries, easily ordered by mail, succeed where others fail. To use her Wrinkle Chaser and Tissue Cream each night before retiring is to dip in the Fountain of Youth. Erases wrinkles, restores natural oils to dry skin, builds firm tissue. $1.00 (10c extra by mail). Restores new life and vigor to the skin and youthful contour to the face. Used as massage cream, corrects sagging muscles. Dorothy Wanda' Cleansing Cream, at 60c, and her Protective Cream in white, flesh, or brunette, 60c, are two important helps in clearing and youthifying your skin. Easily ordered by mail from the Dorothy Wanda Beauty Shop, 8th Floor, Lawrence Bldg., 34 West St. Wanda's scalp treatment, expert hair dressing, manicures and facials are endorsed by discriminating women in highest business and social circles.



Mr. Fritz Returns

From New York with timely tips on what's new and smart in hair cuts and curls. He'll be welcomed by his many patrons.



His marcels and becoming bobs are too well known to need further recommendation from me. I only am so fond of the friendly Fritz Beauty Parlor at 125 Tremont St., Room 403, and so proud of the special olive oil manicures that I shall there for just the regular charge, 50c. The polish lasts for ten days. And if you haven't met Doris Reis or enjoyed one of her skillful facials you're missing a lot. Hers is the famous European tapping system that don't stretch the skin. And oh! the joy of a shampoo at her expert fingers—way down your spine. Even eyebrow shaping is included in her facials. She's especially expert in white henna bleaching at the most reasonable rates. Artistic permanents, too. Tel. Con. 5678.

Now Draw the Curtains

For those all-important, before-bedtime beauty rites. Yes, we do look pretty frazzled after our strenuous day. But it's comforting to know that a few moments spent with the Virmol family will magically remove the mask of fatigue. Never a night should pass without paying our respect to Virmol—lest Virmol forgets its respect to us. And how we would miss the stimulating effect, the joy of feeling the tiny muscles stand up and stretch out their arms for it when the moistened cotton is patted against them. Fortunately the Virmol habit is pleasantly persistent because it produces such magic results in holding and restoring youth. You'll be glad to know that R. H. Stearns & Co., 140 Tremont St., can now supply you with the Virmol Face Bath—the 4-ounce size for $1.25, and the 8-ounce for $2.00

FLOOD FUNDS UP TO COOLIDGE

Washington, Sept. 12 (A.P.)—Refreshed by his three-months' rest, during the Black Hills of South Dakota, President Coolidge was at his desk today to tackle an accumulation of important business he had sidetracked pending conferences here with government and Congressional leaders.

A more immediate question holding his attention today was the problem of finding funds for repairing the Mississippi River levees, for which Comptroller-General McCarl has declined permission of the use of unexpended money of the Rivers and Harbors appropriation. Secretary Hoover, director of flood relief, had recommended immediate use of these funds and it was understood the President favored this course.

In a series of conferences arranged for the next few weeks, the President hopes to reach decisions on the following:

Necessity of an early special session of Congress or a special session of the Senate.

Appointment of ambassadors to Mexico and Cuba.

Selection of a successor to the late Leonard Wood as governor-general of the Philippine Islands.

AIN'T LOVE GRAND? HE FORGETS EVEN DUTY FOR IT

Worcester, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—Enlistment in the Coast Guard is only a mere incident compared to a honeymoon, according to Albertus Seegrate of Uxbridge. In fact, a honeymoon can cause a fellow to forget he ever enlisted. Albertus enlisted about a year ago. A few months later he returned in keeping with a promise to his sweetheart and they were married. Then came the honeymoon.

When the couple arrived back in Uxbridge a reception committee of one, namely Chief ofPolice Carmody, met them. His welcome address to Albertus consisted of information he was several months overdue on his leave of absence from the Coast Guard and must leave his bride and return. Albertus went to see what his officers may have in store for him.

DECLARES "HIGH SPEED" ADS CAUSE ACCIDENTS

Pittsburgh, Sept. 12 (A.P.)—Declearing emphasis on high speed in advertisements of automobile manufacturers has "caused an unfortunate psychological reaction among automobile drivers to discover for themselves whether performance equals promise," the Pittsburgh better traffic committee has urged manufacturers to stress power rather than speed.

In a circular letter to all automobile manufacturers, Pittsburgh traffic organizations, and the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the committee declared this emphasis "is an important factor in most of the traffic casualties."

Farmer Seeks Wife at 5 and 10; Must Be Poor Girl

Rome, Ga., Sept. 12 (A.P.).—Rich, good-looking city girls not wanted.

Poor, honest, country girls are asked to form a line at the left.

A farmer near Armuchee wants a wife, and having "not much time to spare now," he asks the proprietor of a five-and-ten-cent-store in Rome to "look me up a girl soon."

Not bashful, he styles himself a bachelor boy past 46, and says he has plenty of money.

"I have a 63-acre farm. I do not intend to work hard on it," the Georgian says. "I don't need it. I want a poor country girl 30 years or so, more or less, 20 to 36. Single preferred, but not too particular. Long as she is healthy and honest.. I do not want a pretty girl. Not too old or too young. Reward for same."

ROME GREETS LEGION MEN

Rome, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—The vanguard of the American Legion en route to Paris for its convention arrived here this afternoon in the form of 210 members from Massachusetts. They landed from the steamer Martha Washington at Naples this morning.

The party was headed by Charles Flynn and Davis Michaels. They were greeted at the station by representatives of the American embassy and of all the Italian Associations of war veterans. The delegation will return to Naples this afternoon after visiting the tomb of Italy's "unknown soldier."

Cholera Kills Hundreds

Peking, Sept. 12 (A.P.)—Cholera, which has already caused hundreds of deaths among the soldiers in the Yangtze Valley fighting area, has reached the army at Tientsin.

Radio Dialog

By C. WILLIAM RADOS

ARE you ready? Ready for National Radio Day on September 21. This will be the greatest nation-wide broadcast ever attempted. September 22 is the Dempsey-Tunney scrap, also via radio, October 6 starts the broadcasts of the World Series.

These are only a few of the outstanding broadcasts due in the next few weeks. You need have no interest whatever in radio to want to listen to sports, concerts and dinner music.

Batteries, tubes, new parts, are always needed. Then buy a new set. If you think you cannot, attend the radio show and change your mind.

WBET has the best location of any radio station in Boston. It is on top of the First National Bank.

* * *

WFI in Philadelphia is built in a glass booth in the middle of the store. Operators and announcer say they now know what the mills inside of a bottle feels like.

In response to our plea for some real comedy on the air comes a letter from the Columbia broadcasting system. Heretofore in spite of many publicity releases, about the only news about Columbia was its formation.

Now we learn that Moran and Mack, phonograph record artists, will poke fun in the air at the radio banquet, September 21. We hope they will broadcast periodically if they prove radiolly funny.

A few nights ago a listener called WAGS in Lexington and complained that the coast guard radiophone was interfering. Investigation resulted in finding that a government broadcaster at Nahant is talking to the coast guard cruiser and was being picked up by listeners.

A. & P. GYPSIES OPEN WITH "POET AND PEASANT"

WEEI, WCSH, WJAR listeners are the lucky ones to whom the Gypsies will come tonight at 8:30 after a Summer respite. The famous versatile string orchestra in the hour of music will feature a group of 12 Russian and Hungarian selections, among them the beautiful Von Lappe "Poet and Peasant."

* * *

THE big act with WBZ and WBZA tonight starts at 7:30, when Roxy and his gang frolick before the mikes of WBZ. This time a little seriousness will precede the jollity furnished by the one hundred-voice Russian Cathedral Choir chorus. The theatre organ, cathedral chimes and one hundred-piece symphony orchestra will also be heard during the ninety-minute broadcast.

Roxy

BACK again once more is the popular Joe Rines Orchestra. WNAC tonight at 6:30 presents Joe Rines in dinner music, while WEEI broadcasts him at 11:30.

2 U. S. GIRLS TO TRY ATLANTIC HOPS DESPITE OLD GLORY'S FATE

LEVINE AND 3 OTHERS GIVE UP

New York, Sept. 12 (A.P.)—In the face of new tragic reports from sea captains of the fate of the monoplane Old Glory, and withdrawal of four other projected flights, three planes today remained in the transatlantic air adventure.

Miss Frances W. Grayson, Long Island student aviatrix, said she intended to fly to Europe with a pilot and a navigator in a Sikorsky amphibian plane, while Miss Ruth Elder and Capt. Robert MacIntosh, British flyer, reiterated their determination not to be dissuaded from attempting their overseas hops.

Miss Elder, who flew from Detroit to Tampa, Fla., last week, plans to fly to New York early this week for a take-off toward Paris, Thursday or Friday.

LEVINE AND COURTNEY OUT.

Capt. Anthony Wreford withdrew as co-pilot for MacIntosh, and from Paris came word of the cancellation by Lieut. Paul Tarascon of his plan to fly to America.

To these were added the definite withdrawals of Charles A. Levine and Capt. Frank T. Courtney from the transatlantic lists. Levine is in England and Courtney in Spain.

Captain MacIntosh replaced Wreford by Commander Fitzmaurice of the Irish Free State Air corps, and spent four hours in the air on a test flight. "My machine can last the range," he said confidently.

The Westminster Gazette, backer of Courtney's flight, announced abandonment of the project until next year after notifying the airman at Corunna, Spain, that he was released from any obligation to carry on.

Meanwhile, Levine withdrew from the adventure and made plans for a round-the-world flight in 1928.

HINCHCLIFFE'S PLANS.

Captain Hinchcliffe, Levine's pilot, said he had decided to start eastward on an endurance flight Wednesday or Thursday with Karachi, India, as his probable destination.

The monoplane Royal Windsor, in which Phil Wood and A. C. (Duke) Schiller had planned a transatlantic flight, was at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, awaiting favorable weather for a return flight to Cardenard, Me., where they were halted recently in their attempted jump overseas.

Capt. Rene Fonck, French ace, whose transatlantic plans received a severe setback when the Navy Department cancelled leaves of absence to two of his crew, Lieut. Lawrence Curtin and Ensign Stephen Edwards, from New York cabled the French government to learn its attitude on his flight before announcing definite abandonment of his expedition.

SEARCH FOR OLD GLORY.

Meanwhile the search for Old Glory was carried on in the North Atlantic by the steamer Kyle, chartered by the New York Mirror, of which Phil Payne, passenger on the plane, was managing editor.

Other ships are searching for the monoplane Sir John Carling and her crew of two officers.

Through high-running seas the Kyle ploughed toward the point 500 miles off Newfoundland where Old Glory was believed to have gone down after sending an S O S call early last Wednesday morning. No trace of the plane had been found, the ship reported.

The futile search of the liners Transylvania, Carmania and Laplant was described by masters of these vessels when they reached New York. The captains said the airplane could not have kept afloat more than half an hour in the rough sea.

would have more money now than New York City is worth.

Chauncey Depew, past ninety years, tells how he put $100 in the savings bank, sixty-six years ago, and now has $1,109 in the bank.

But interest, while sure, is slow. A good idea makes money quickly.

John E. Andrus, called the "strap hanger millionaire" because he hangs to street car straps when he might ride in his automobile, bought one share of Singer Sewing Machine stock for a few dollars in 1864. Having bought a good thing, he knew enough to keep it. That share has paid him, thus far $94,600.

It was not Mr. Andrus's thrift that made the money, but THE IDEA of another man, putting the eye of the needle in the needle's point, instead of the other end, thus making the sewing machine possible.

Be thrifty, save, let interest work for you by all means. But use your brain, for QUICK results.

Mrs. Bina Abramowitz, a Jewish actress, with six children, and nine grandchildren, will be the star in a new play, "Greenberg's Daughter." That Mrs. Abramowitz is sixty-two years old will interest everybody, but the fact need not surprise anyone.

Sarah Bernhardt, another Jewish actress, when sixty-two, was at the height of her power. Women become old at fifty, not because their minds are less active than the minds of men, but because at fifty their children are gone, or no longer need them, and the world gives them nothing worth while to do.

Wasted power in waterfalls is as nothing compared with waste of power in the brains of women past middle age, without occupation to give their intelligence full play.

William B. Leeds, young American with a great deal of money, sets a good example. He took out a license as air pilot, flying thirty-five minutes under inspection to prove his ability. Mr. Leeds, with no particular flying plans in mind, says, "we shall all have to learn flying sooner or later."

Mr Leeds' example is recommended to all rich young gentlemen. If each young sportsman owned a high speed pursuit plane and knew how to manage it, this country would be safer.

W. J. BRYAN, JR.'S, SUIT FOR DIVORCE CONFIRMED

Los Angeles, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—William Jennings Bryan, Jr., son of the commoner, has confirmed reports that he filed suit here for divorce from Mrs. Helen Virginia Bryan, on charges of desertion. Bryan said his wife is visiting her father near Fredericksburg, Va.

Bryan, an attorney, filed a petition to be appointed guardian of his daughters so they might inherit $2,000 each left them by their grandfather, the former Democratic candidate for President and later cabinet member.

G. A. R. TO STAY, SAYS WALSH

Grand Rapids, Mich. Sept. 12 (A.P.)—The Grand Army of the Republic will not disband as long as two of its members are left, if Frank A. Walsh of Milwaukee, commander-in-chief of the organization, has his way.

He voiced his insistence in commenting on talk heard as the annual encampment opened today, that next year's gathering might be the last one held by the Grand Army. No invitations had been received for next year's encampment and there was a feeling that Grand Rapids might be made permanent headquarters.

Walsh was under the care of a special nurse and his condition may keep him from encampment meetings.

Mrs. Sarah J. Ehrmann of Leckawanna, N. Y., was elected president of the Federated Patriotic Societies. Dr. Ernest W. Homan, West Lynn, Mass., vice-president and Miss Kate G. Raynor of Toledo, secretary-treasurer.

GIRL AVIATOR HOPS FOR WHEELING, W. VA.

Tampa, Fla., Sept. 12 (A.P.).—The monoplane American Girl, with George Haldeman at the controls and Miss Ruth Elder in the co-pilot's seat, hopped off at 7:11 a. m., Eastern Standard time, for Wheeling, West Virginia.

HILL AT GRAVE OF SLAIN MOTHER DENIES GUILT

Ottawa, Ill., Sept. 12 (A.P.).—Harry Hill stood in the gloom-shadowed basement of the Hill homestead early today, looked into the shallow grave where the body of his mother had been found, and repeated again his denial of all knowledge of how she met her death.

For an hour he was questioned in the dimlit cellar by officers without further result.

5 BALLOONS IN RACE LAND SAFELY

Detroit, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—The Italian balloon Dux, piloted by Lieut. Col. Domenico Leone, and the English balloon Bee, with Captain G. F. Meazer as pilot, landed safety last night, according to messages from the pilots received here today. The Dux landed 10 miles east of Newberry, S. C., and the Bee came to earth near Randolph, Va.

Florence, S. C., Sept. 12 (A.P.).—The Belgian balloon Belgica landed today near Syracuse, 13 miles north of Florence.

Sandersville, Ga., Sept. 12 (A.P.).—A white balloon passed over this place at 3 o'clock this morning, headed south. It was 6,000 feet up, traveling about 40 miles an hour.

Anderson, S. C., Sept. 12.—The balloon Goodyear VI, piloted by Wade T. Van Orman, winner of last year's Gordon Bennett Cup race, passed over Belton at 8:35 o'clock this morning headed south at a good rate of speed, about 6,000 feet up.

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 12 (I.N.S.).—Five of the 15 entries in the Gordon Bennett international balloon race had landed in various parts of the Carolinas today.

The U. S. Army, piloted by Capt. W. E. Kepner, landed near York, S. C., a few miles below the North Carolina line, approximately 525 miles from the start.

The Paris-Bruxelles, piloted by M. Maurice Bienaime and Alde A. Vennin, came down near Dunn, in eastern North Carolina, after exhausting its ballast. They were also approximately 525 miles from the start, it was estimated.

The Wallonie, piloted by H. Quersin and Alde M. Thein, descended six miles south of Greenville, S. C., after an uneventful flight. It was estimated it was about the same distance from the start.

The Swiss entry, Helvetia, traveled approximately 450 miles, landing sixteen miles north of Statesville, N. C., at 2:15 P. M. yesterday.

The Belgian entry, Beldica, landed near Florence, S. C.

Pilots told of encountering numerous storms en route from Detroit to the Carolinas. Pilot Maurice Bienaime of the Paris-Brussels, which landed near Dunn, N. C., said they had passed through storm after storm Saturday night, and that at one time they ascended to a height of 15,000 feet.

Captain W. E. Kepner, pilot of the U. S. Army entry and Lieutenant W. O. Ericson, aide, reported that in the course of their trip over the mountains of western North Carolina Sunday afternoon their bag was sucked up to a height of 27,000 feet, causing them to lose gas.

Plane With Wings That Flap to Be Tried Out Today

Curtiss Field, N. Y., Sept. 12.—An idea cherished since 1893 and embodied in a strange flying machine equipped with wings that flap like those of a bird was to be put to the tess today by its inventor, Lehman Wilde, 60, of Brooklyn. Wilde believes the mechanism of his plane will reproduce the motions governing the flight of a bird. Motive power is provided by pedals and hand levers and Wilde calls his machine an "ornithcopter."

$300 A MONTH ALIMONY FOR MRS. BENSON

Mrs. Gertrude A. Benson, of Dorchester, wife of Arthur E. Benson, salesmanager and a director of the McKenzie Engraving Company, was granted $3.0 monthly and $500 as court expenses today in Suffolk Probate Court pending further orders of the court in separate maintenance proceedings.

According to Mrs. Benson, in answer to questions by Attorney John P. Feeney, Benson left her two years ago for no cause, although she admitted they had quarrels. She also admitted that he provided her with an automobile, clothing and charge accounts at the stores, but that when he left he gave her only $75 a month. Later she said this was raised by a court order to $150 a month.

Benson, on the witness stand, admitted that he earned $20,000 a year, but out of this he has to pay $10,000 for traveling expenses. Attorney Feeney drew out fro n him that his traveling consisted of one trip a week to New York.

HUNTER SHOOTS HIS FATHER FOR SQUIRREL

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Sept. 12 (A.P.)—Shooting at what he thought was a squirrel, John L. Hinzler, Jr., 18, today shot and killed his father. They were on a hunting expedition, and at one point separated. As the older Himler made his way through the brush, the noise attracted the son's attention. Without pausing, young Himler fired pointblank into the foliage in front of him, and then saw his father fall. No charge was made against the son.

WOULD DEPORT 'REDS, PINKS, YELLOWS'

A resolution, looking to a clean-up of "not only the foreign Reds among us, but the parlor pinks and native yellows as well, whether connected with our hibher institutions of learning or merely of the common garden variety," today was filed for consideration of the incoming legislature by Representative Harrison H. Atwood of Dorchester.

It is the first direct aftermath of the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

Here is the resolve, certified copies of which Atwood would have forwarded to Massachusetts' Senators and Representatives in Congress.

"The Massachusetts Legislature favors such legislation as will provide for a national census and registration of all aliens; for the deportation forthwith of all such aliens as are found to be illegally within our borders, and also for the deportation of all such aliens as are found to be advocates of the overthrow of our government by violence, or found to profess or advocate the principles of anarchism, communism or socialism leading to or inciting class war, civil disturbances or capital crimes."

Atwood, in addition, plans to file a bill modeled on the California criminal syndicalism law, so there will be ample legislation to reach "not only the foreign Reds among us, but the parlor pinks and native yellows as well."

2 MILLION GIFT BY J. D., JR.

Geneva, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is the sole donor of the $2,000,000 fund for the erection of a library for the League of Nations, it was announced in the league assembly today.

The donor was announced by President Alberton N. Guani of the league after the assembly had accepted the gift unanimously.

The announcement was greeted with prolonged applause as was Guani's tribute to the humanitarian work of the Rockfeller Foundation.

Dr. Giuseppi Motta, President of Switzerland, paid glowing tribute to the American generosity and said that he rejoiced that Geneva would benefit from the donation.

The natural curve of the arch varies with the individual just as size and width of feet do. We discovered that long ago when we brought out the first Arch Support Shoes.

So, you see, ordinary "Arch Support Shoes" may injure more than they help. Coward Arch Support Shoes alone are built in three elevations, high; low and medium. Here a skilled fitter knows just what degree of propping your arches need and supplies you with just the right shoes.

PUBLICITY BOOSTS SALES

That advertising is one of the most constructive economic forces in existence was emphasized today by Charles P. Abbott, executive director, American Institute of Steel Construction, in his address at the fourteenth annual Business Conference at Babson Park. His subject was "The Basic Problem of Sales Management."

"The powerful influence of advertising has been proved many times during recent years," said Mr. Abbott, "both in the cultivation of old markets and the development of new ones.

"I am not an advertising man, but in my opinion advertising is one of the most constructive economic forces in existence today. Intelligently directed, it will tend to stabilize prices, improve profits and smooth the road for the salesman.

"The expenditure of $200,000 for advertising by the British fruit trade in 1926 boosted the sales of fruit by $10,000,000, or $50 in sales for every dollar spent in advertising.

AUTO ADVERTISING PAYS.

"The tremendous increase in sales of Chevrolet automobiles is at least partly explained by the fact that Chevrolet led all makes in newspaper lineage during the first four months of 1927.

"The makers of paints and varnishes and oils began to advertise on a national scale in 1920. Between 1920 and 1925 the output was virtually doubled. Sales in 1922 showed an increase of 21 per cent. over 1921.

"In 1922, the sale of India tea in the United States was 4,000,000 pounds. Between 1923 and 1925, $400,000 was spent in advertising. In 1925, the sales amounted to 17,500,000 pounds.

NO ADS, SALES DROP.

"Until a little over a year ago Japanese tea was not advertised, and even then the advertising was confined to eight Middle Western States. The importation of Japanese tea is less than half of what it was 30 years ago."

"What Color Means to Business," was the topic of an address today by Ward Cheney, of Cheney Brothers, silk manufacturers.

He pointed out that color trends exist as fundamentally in regard to the public's desire for merchandise today as they exist in the native of the Congo.

"Color," he stated, "is one of the most influential factors in the salesmanship of products today and we must pay attention to it whether it be in motor cars or cigarettes."

A Real Drama of Intrigue in Boston Theatrical Life After Curtain

The Boston Evening American begins today the publication of a new serial of a Great Love. It is a real drama of the intrigues of Boston theatrical life after the final curtains are down—the story of a girl who climbed the perilous ladder of success. A vivid serial of life "back stage."

CHAPTER I.

THIS is a story that is told in the restaurants of Boston's late homes, especially by ladies of the chorus. They tell it understandingly and enviously, too, for it is a romantic story—such a story as any one of them would gladly have for her own.

Indeed it is a story of one who was for a time in the chorus of famous Revue; the story of Rebecca O'Brien McCloskey, child of the tenements and of the footlights and it is also the story of John Carroll Estabrook, 3rd, of the Massachusetts Estabrooks.

It is necessary, however, that it should be also to some extent the story of what happened before they met, for history has recorded some black pages in the life of Becky McCloskey, black pages on which are inscribed such words as hunger, and cold, and want. And history has also inscribed on those early pages, as well as on later ones, the name of Dan Scarlett, called the Dandelion.

So it is with Dan Scarlett that we walk toward the Back Bay, in the city of Boston, at 6 o'clock on a New Year's Eve that was cold, and bleak, and cut with an icy drizzle.

Mr. Scarlett had put on good clothes. The pinch-back suit and checked cap familiar to certain quarters east of Copley Square were locked in Mr. Scarlett's wardrobe. Tonight he wore a stupendous raccoon coat and his gray felt hat that was pitched at an angle exactly in accordance with the tips of his waxed blonde mustache.

Scarlett swung his walking stick and made his way up Boylston street.

And then he saw it. There, in a doorway, just beyond the glow of the light. It might have been a bag, a black sack, not stuffed very full, either. But Scarlett, being a person who lived by his wits, recognized it at once as the figure of a girl with her knees drawn up, and her head bowed on her knees. And, as if this dismal and desolate sight was not enough to spoil the

Friday's Hand as Played by Mr. Whitehead

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 2. East sets a trap, in hopes of catching the Declarer, by playing the Ace, although able to take the trick with the Queen. He knows that should he take the trick with the Queen and establish his Clubs, Declarer would avoid leading Hearts again, for fear of East holding the Ace as an entry for his established Clubs. Whereas by playing the Ace, Declarer on his next lead of Hearts would naturally finesse the Jack, placing the Queen with West. This desperate expedient was a piece of legitimate strategy justified by the hopelessness of the situation as shown by Dummy's exceptionally strong support for his partner's No Trump bid.

Trick 13. Declarer finesses as expected, but not until after he had taken sufficient tricks in other suits for game.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

KEEP TO FIGHT EX-WIFE FOR $70,000

That former Lieutenant-Commander Howard Sanford Keep, Annapolis graduate and leader of a South Sea island treasure hunt, does not intend to let the $70,000 estate of his father, the late Henry A. Keep of Boston and Lowell, go to his divorced wife, Ruth R. Keep, was indicated today in Middlesex Probate Court by filing of appearance by counsel for Keep.

The attorneys are Boutwell & Hastings of Boston.

Under the will of Henry A. Keep, a Boston paper manufacturer, Howard was cut off with a bequest of $1 "and no more," the residue of the estate, estimated at $70,000 going to the divorced wife of Howard.

Mrs. Keep now lives in Fairmont street, Lowell. She was married to Keep in Wellesley in 1917 and on June 5, 1925, she was awarded a decree for desertion and given custody of their two children. The elder Keep died on April 19 and the will was offered for probate on April 25.

Mr. Keep and his son had a disagreement some years ago. The latter was a lieutenant in the navy during the World War. He resigned five years ago and was in business in the South. He was also pilot of a treasure hunt of university men, which was unsuccessful.

HE LEARNS—BUT IT IS COSTLY, AND CONFINING

You'd think Joseph Delella would have learned his lesson.

Robbed of $81 he got his money back when police arrested the four robbers, but he was held in jail nearly two months as a material witness.

After testifying against the four last week, he was released and was paid $185 in witness fees. Now he's again a victim, according to police, this time to the extent of $150, and he's again a prospective candidate for the material witness role.

Police say he belongs to the large army of "those who won't learn a lesson."

He was held as a material witness in the first robbery because, having his money back and living in Miami, he would be apt to leave town, the authorities said.

When he drew the $185 witness fees in payment for his long stay in jail, Special Officer Sullivan of Hanover street division, who had got Joe's money back, advised him to hurry home.

Instead, Delella decided to bank $150. He entered a North End place that looked to him like a bank—although it wasn't one—and paid over this amount to Salvatore DiPierro, according to his story to the police.

DiPierro is alleged to have refused to give him a receipt and to have refused today to give him his money. Police arrested DiPierro and in Municipal Court he was held in $500 for trial Wednesday.

WRECKAGE CLEW TO LOST BOAT

Lunenberg, N. S., Sept. 12 (I.N.S.).—Wreckage believed to be that of the fishing schooner Clayton Walters, which sailed from here for the Grand Banks nearly two months ago with a crew of twenty and has not been heard from since, has been found on the northeast bar of Sable Island, a wireless message from that place revealed today.

The wreckage included a dory, several barrels of flour and other equipment. There was no mark of identification on the wreckage, but it is believed to have been from the Clayton Walters.

The schooner is believed to have foundered in the terrific gale which claimed many lives off the Grand Banks two weeks ago.

William Gardner, director of the Grand Hotel at Pourville, who was driving, was badly injured.

THREE WOMEN GRANTED DIVORCE AT DEDHAM

Three women were granted divorces by Judge Joseph R. McCoole in Norfolk Probate Court at Dedham today. Mrs. Janet C. Greene of Worcester was given a decree from Leon J. Greene, also of Worcester, the couple having resided in Quincy at the time action was brought. The woman testified they were married September 5, 1923, and charged cruel and abusive treatment and failure to provide. She was given the right to resume her maiden name of Elliott.

Mrs. Francis C. Burke of Quincy was granted a divorce from James F. Burns of parts unknown. They were married October 30, 1922, and Burns deserted her the following December.

Mrs. Mary A. Bowen of Medford was granted a decree from Edmund C. Bowen of Freeport, Me., on the ground of desertion, and was given custody of three children.

MAYOR TO ACT ON CITY WORKERS' TROUBLE

The threatened strike of more than 1,500 city workers was temporarily averted today when Mayor Nichols agreed to confer with members of the Building Trades Council on the matters under dispute.

Ernest A. Johnson, business agent for the council, announced the conciliation meeting would be held in the Mayor's office tomorrow afternoon.

The workers allege that non-union labor, composed largely of non-citizens, and wages lower than the union scale have been introduced by city officials, affecting work on streets, school houses and public buildings.

DEATH RECALLS MYSTERY OF 36 YEARS AGO

The death of Thomas Leahy, for almost forty years drawtender at the Wellington bridge over the Mystic River, recalls to thousands the Tena Davis murder mystery, which stirred Boston and New England more than thirty-six years ago.

It was Leahy, then a young man, who pulled the body of the murdered girl from the waters of the Mystic River, near the Wellington bridge, and he was one of the important witnesses in the famous murder trials which followed.

The State charged that Tena Davis was slain by her sweetheart, James Albert Trefethen, because of her condition and because she wooed another girl in Dorchester. His brother-in-law, William H. Smith, also was tried as an accomplice. Smith was acquitted, but Trefethen was found guilty of murder in the first degree.

TREFETHEN ACQUITTED.

Subsequently, his attorneys appealed for a new trial, which was granted and the jury, in the second trial, acquitted Trefethen.

Trefethen died several years ago.

The case excited such interest in Boston that older residents still easily remember that at the time there was a popular jingle about the crime, which the children sang as they played about the streets. The bit of doggrel ran:

Tena Davis now is dead,
Killed by Trefethen, 'tis said;
Took her for a buggy ride,
Threw her in the Mystic tide.

Deletena J. Davis was the daughter of a country doctor in Bethel, Me. When the girl was 13 years old her father died, leaving her about $1,500 in cash, the remainder of the estate going to his widow.

Mother and daughter came to Boston in 1887, and the young girl, then 21, opened a fancy goods store in Perkins street, Charlestown. The girl sold fancy goods, pickled lines and small confections, and apparently made enough money to keep herself and mother in comfort.

COURTED HER.

In Everett, James Albert Trefethen, a young man about two years older than Tena Davis, conducted a store similar to the one run by the Davis girl. He also ran a small wholesale business and drove about Everett and Charlestown, selling dry goods to the dry goods stores. In this way he became acquainted with Tena Davis.

After a year or so, Trefethen, whose home originally was in Saugus, began paying court to the girl. Trefethen gradually gained complete control of the girl who never before had had a sweetheart. He showered her to buy his old store in Everett, while he built a more commodious place, nearby.

It was in the early Winter of 1891 that the lovers told her sweetheart he must marry her. Trefethen told her he could not do so because he was already married.

Badly frightened, the girl made an investigation and found that Trefethen was not telling her the truth. She insisted that he lead her to the altar.

WENT TO KEEP TRYST.

On the evening of Dec. 22, 1891, Tena Davis met Trefethen at Sullivan square and they had a long talk. The next day the girl appeared much more cheerful and satisfied. Early that evening she told her mother she was to meet Trefethen again, and that everything would be all right.

The girl ostensibly went to keep a tryst with her sweetheart. It was the last ever seen of her alive.

The following day the girl's mother received a letter, mailed in Boston and scrawled with a lead pencil. The note read:

"Mother when you get this I shall be dead. The one you think guilty is innocent."

Two days later, the girl's hat was found along the water near the Wellington Bridge and on January 10 her body was found floating in the river by Drawtender Leahy.

Subsequently Trefethen was arrested, charged with murder and then his brother-in-law, Smith, was arrested.

At the trial, witnesses testified that they saw Tena Davis waiting on a corner near her home. Other witnesses testified that they later saw Trefethen's horse and buggy nearby, the horse being held by the brother-in-law, Smith. Other witnesses saw a girl enter the buggy which drove off in the direction of Malden.

Frank H. Fitzpatrick, who was near the Wellington Bridge about 8 o'clock, heard a woman scream and then heard a buggy turn hastily about on the bridge and head for Everett. Other witnesses testified they saw Trefethen drive into Everett some time later, with his horse in a lather of sweat.

A strand of Tena Davis' hair was found in the buggy, and Trefethen could furnish no satisfactory alibi for the time that elapsed between 7 and 9 o'clock. Handwriting experts testified that the note received by the mother was in Trefethen's handwriting, and that it could not have been written by the girl.

The jury was out only a short time when a verdict of guilty was returned against Trefethen, but his brother-in-law was acquitted.

At the second trial substantially the same evidence was offered, but the jury, after deliberating several hours, returned a verdict of not guilty.

HUSBAND OF STAR RETURNS TO MOVIES

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Rudolph Cameron's sudden appearance in Hollywood after an absence of many years, was put down to one thing, a definite move to obtain his much rumored freedom from Anita Stewart. Anita, who has many admirers, has let the years go by without divorcing young Cameron who was her leading man in the old Vitagraph days.

Divorce, may have been in Rudy Cameron's mind, but apparently so was a job in the movies. At least before any divorces papers were filed he got a job. It seems a peculiar trick of fate that his return engagement to the screen should be made in "Coney Island," Ralph Ince's last picture.

Ralph, only a few years ago was married to Lucille Lee Stewart, a sister of Anita. After being divorced from her he married Lucille Mendez, who is now his leading lady.

The association of the two erstwhile brothers-in-law was brought about in this way. Ralph Ince had been playing the lead in "Coney Island" as well as directing it, when he decided it was better to let some one else be the hero. So Cameron, who is a young and good looking man was chosen as Ince's successor.

THERE is no stopping these newspaper reporters once they get started. Here we have Roland Drew, fighting to present him as my readers, a newspaper reporter with movie ambitions. He travels West to get a chance in the "filums" and picks for himself one of the big roles of the year in "Ramona."

That Christopher Columbus of the movies, Edwin Carewe, took enough tests to fill any ordinary sized rogues' gallery to get the right man to play Felipe. Veterans of the screen astonished to tests. Then came Roland Drew, ex-Manhattan reporter, and he screened so well he was given the job.

Dolores Del Rio as Romona and Warner Baxter as Alessandro complete the cast. Lucky Dolores! Ole Man Baxter is a perfect assignment as any reporter could wish. The whole Carewe company has gone to Zion Zion for film exteriors.

JETTA GOUDAL, "that cocktail of emotion" (phrase not my own) has been replaced in "The Leopard Woman" by Jacqueline Logan. I wouldn't for anything in the world insinuate that Miss Goudal's temperamental outbursts had anything to do with Miss Logan getting the job.

Once Miss Goudal intimated that I had been unfair to her and I do not wish to repeat the offense. But at any rate, Miss Logan steps into the role formerly assigned to Miss Goudal.

Robert Armstrong, the lad who played the prize fighter in "Is Zat So" on the stage, will play opposite her. He has just finished the "Main Event" for De Mille. Rupert Julian, the director, calls "camera" the latter part of this week.

BEBE DANIELS IS METROPOLITAN ATTRACTION

"Swim, Girl, Swim," at the Metropolitan, is another of the "college" series, a romping affair, in which the gay undergraduates never seem to open a book or enter a classroom. All is athletics and gadding about. Clarence Badger directed, and the principal players in support of the star are William Austin, Josephine Dunn and James Hall. Gertrude Edelie, making her initial appearance in the films, does a little swimming and some very natural looking acting.

Bebe Daniels

The story concerns a very studious girl—Miss Daniels, of course—who has an ambition to become an athlete instead of always being known as a bookworm.

In a spirit of jest she is given a place on the swimming team when, if the truth were known, she cannot swim a stroke. In spite of this she wins the channel swim and is changed overnight to the heroine of the campus and very much in the public eye.

How she overcomes the agony of learning that she did not actually win the swim and how she captures James Hall, the leading man, provides a thousand laughs.

Miss Daniels romps through these situations at a rapid pace; so fast, in fact, that not even Mack Sennett could complain of the speed.

The stage program has two features of unusual importance. There is a John Murray Anderson production, "Joy Bells" with the Metropolitan stage band, Gene Rodemich wielding the baton, and a "Cartoon Circus" by no less a cartoonist than Winsor McKay, the distinguished creator of "Little Nemo."

MISS SWEET AT TWIN HOUSES

Two new photoplays of widely contrasting themes furnish a pleasurable program at the Modern and Beacon theatres. The headliner is the William Fox production, "Singed," with Blanche Sweet starred in a cast including Warner Baxter and Mary McAllister.

The companion picture presents Rin-Tin-Tin in a drama of the western country, "Tracked by the Police," the cast comprising Jason Robards, Virginia Brown Faire and Tom Santschi.

The Vitaphone artists presentations include Charles Hackett, the noted American tenor of the Chicago Opera, Ruth Glanville, saxophone virtuoso, and The Yacht Club Boys, singing entertainers.

Miss Sweet is seen as a former dance hall girl of an oil boom town who had struck it rich, and who tries to live down her unsavory reputation. But in spite of sacrifice and stern endeavor, only failure meets her efforts until a quirk of fate shows her a way to happiness and future respectability. It is a strong od human drama well played and directed.

'STOLEN BRIDE' AT OLYMPIA THEATRE

"The Stolen Bride," at the Washington Street Olympia, starring Billie Dove with Lloyd Hughes, is the first American film made by Alexander Korda, U. A.'s famous director, Given a story with a setting in his native country, Hungary, Korda has made a picture which has won praise. "The Stolen Bride" is a story of Europe before the war and flings to the screen the colorful atmosphere of Budapest and Vienna.

Billie Dove

Franz, son of a Hungarian peasant, now an architect in New York, meets Sari, Countess Thurzo, whom he had known and loved when they were children in their native land. A series of romantic meetings follow and when Sari is called back to Hungary by her father, Franz follows.

Entering his native land after an absence of twelve years, Franz is horrified to discover that he is eligible for three years compulsory military service and is forced into the army on the spot. Franz is involved in an altercation with Baron von Heinberg, who, to get revenge, makes him his orderly.

Sari's father announces the engagement of his daughter to the baron, but Sari swears to Franz that she will marry no one but him. On the wedding night, Illona, a dancer whom the baron had thrown over, brings things to a startling climax. In addition to Miss Dove and Hughes, the cast includes Armand Kalis as the baron, Lilyan Tashman as Illona, Cleve Moore, Yola D'Avril, Winston Miller and others.

What! She Needed Clothes for Big Beauty Contest!

Jersey City, Sept. 12.—A beauty sometimes can have something quite different from a path of roses. Miss Eunice Geiser was "Miss Rockaway" last year for the Atlantic City pageant; she didn't have enough money for clothes, so didn't go.

She was "Miss Jersey City" this year and stayed at home for the same reason. And in addition so many fellows called her, she says, that she lost her job as a telephone operator.

EMIL JANNINGS STARS IN OLYMPIA FILM

Emil Jannings, Europe's greatest screen star, makes his first appearance in an American production in "The Way of All Flesh," now featured on the Scollay Olympia bill.

In this story of the cashier of a German bank in Milwaukee, who goes to Chicago to sell bonds and is waylaid by a girl in league with the gangsters, Jannings displays the best artistry to be found in the films that made him famous abroad.

A ruined man, and reported dead in defense of his trust, he becomes a pedlar and wanders around half starved until, one night, he notices that his son is billed to give a violin recital. He goes to the music hall and later he follows the boy back to Milwaukee, to catch a glimpse of the child of Christian's reunion. There the tragedy has its climax.

Phyllis Haver, still remembered as the gay girl in "What Price Glory," gives a fine portrayal of the heartless gold-digger.

VETERANS TO BE GUESTS AT "THE BIG PARADE"

Joseph H. Brennan, manager of Loew's State Theatre, will play host this afternoon to several hundred World War veterans at the matinee presentation of the colorful war picture, "The Big Parade," now being shown for the second week at Loew's State. The men will be transported to and from the West Roxbury Hospital in buses donated by the Boston Elevated Company.

ELOPING GIRL STOLEN AND RESCUED

Constabulary after a search lasting two days and extending from Newburyport to Topsfield, then to Everett and finally to Lowell.

The names of the three men are known, according to the authorities, and serious charges will be made against them when they are arrested. One is a resident of Lowell, the other an Everett man and the third a "drifter."

FAILS TO RESCUE HER.

The girl's boyish sweetheart, George E. Wright of Augusta, Me., who collapsed after trying unsuccessfully to rescue her from the three strangers, left for his home today after forty-eight hours under treatment at Newburyport hospital.

The boy and girl ran away from home Thursday, according to the police, and in the ride between Auburn, Me., and Portland, were given a ride by three men in an automobile.

The strangers told the boy and girl they were "following the fairs," starved well, one night, he noticed that his son is billed to give a violin recital. He goes to the music hall and later he follows the boy back to Milwaukee, to catch a glimpse of the child of Christian's reunion. There the tragedy has its climax.

Phyllis Haver, still remembered as the gay girl in "What Price Glory," gives a fine portrayal of the heartless gold-digger.

NEW AND BETTER RULE FOR FRYING OF FISH

Delicious New Rule

As I was lunching in a certain popular sea grill the other day it struck me that a very large number of people seem eager and willing to consume fish in large quantities in hotels and restaurants who could not be hired to eat it at home. Pursuing my observation further, it occurred to me that the reason for this might be the difference in the method of cooking, for certainly the fish we get on our tables in these sea-port cities is the same as that served in the restaurants. Fish supplies certain definite needs of the body, and instinctively we eat it when we feel the need for it.

The important things in the proper preparation of fish, next to having it absolutely fresh, is the method by which it is cooked. Perhaps you have in mind the platter of dejected looking slabs of fish with curled-up edges that are too brown, or perhaps little pieces of burned skin sticking around all over the pieces, the whole surrounded by a sad odor of burning fat. The old-fashioned way of frying fish was to put it in the frying pan with a dab of cooking fat and let it smoke and sizzle, as was its habit, until done.

HAVE HADDOCK OR COD CUT IN PIECES SUITABLE FOR FRYING
DIP FISH IN WELL-SALTED EVAPORATED MILK
NEXT ROLL EACH PIECE IN DRY BREAD CRUMBS OR CEREAL FILL KETTLE 2" DEEP WITH VEGETABLE COOKING OIL
FRY FISH UNTIL GOLDEN BROWN

To be properly fried, fish should be cooked in deep fat, just as you would cook doughnuts or fritters. This prevents it cking to the pan, which is death on a fine appearing piece of fish, and makes a lovely brown, done-to-a-turn morsel which makes the epicure's mouth water in anticipation

To make a truly delectable dish, and one that your family will call for again, use the following recipe. To be sure that the fish comes out a deep golden brown, free from the greasy appearance and taste that sometimes characterizes fried foods, use a fine grade of vegetable cooking oil, the kind I use in the Martha Lee Kitchen, to obtain for you the best results. It will not absorb the fishy flavor and can be used over again, which is a wonderfully economical advantage.

Have haddock of cod cut in pieces suitable for frying, and dip fish in well-salted evaporated milk. Next roll each piece in dry bread crumbs or cereal. Fill kettle two inches deep with vegetable cooking oil, and fry fish until golden brown.

Catsup, Chill Sauce Add Zest to Meal

A really good catsup and chili sauce adds zest to your meal. The perfect complement to a platter of cold meats is a fine, zippy chili sauce and the traditional Boston Baked Bean will be forlorn, indeed, without its accompanying tomato catsup.

In choosing your condiments be sure it has a well-known maker's brand on the bottle. Flavor is not a matter of luck, but of careful planning, in the growing of the raw material, in the cooking and in the packing. Why not have the best, shall I whisper the name?

Here is expert advice from a woman who does 10 washings a week—by hand!

When we read this letter from Mrs. C. Heiberg of Manchester, N. H., we were sure every woman who does her clothes-washing would value it. Every work day, every washing, Mrs. Heiberg proves she can get clean clothes without drudging.

"I do ten different washings every week—all by hand. I soak the clothes in Chipso suds. About all that is left to do is the rinsing. They smell sweet and look wonderful! Without Chipso I could never do it. And if any woman knows the merits of Chipso, it is I, for I have used it, and only it, for three years."

Does Mrs. Heiberg's method sound too simple and quick to you?

Then we suggest that you try it. Millions of other women have adopted it, for Chipso washings give them clothes they are proud to hang on the line! Yet they aren't worn out—for the Chipso method skips all the hard, old-fashioned steps, soap-chipping and melting, washboard rubbing and boiling.

First, for instant suds, you just pour hot water on the white Chipso flakes. Then, for white, clean clothes, let Chipso suds loosen the dirt. Twenty minutes soaking is enough, though over-night soaking is just as safe. After soaking as long as you wish, squeeze the sudsy water through the clothes—and see the dirt float out! Dirt spots and soiled edges may need a little hand-rubbing. Two rinsings, and you're through!

The large Chipso box takes care of four to six washdays—that is six cents for each washing at the most!

This Lateral Pass Worries Coaches Fun for the Fans

Vale, Two Bills French Were Due Game Will Boom

By NICK FLATLEY

LATERAL PASS HAS FOOTBALL BOYS WORRIED

HARVARD and Tufts roll into football action this week. That means that the season is really on. Every school and college squad in New England will be hard at work by the time another week rolls by and the world will be all steamed up about the Dempsey-Tunney fight

This is going to be quite a gridiron year. The reformers and the deplorers will soon be wailing at the harvest moon

Nick Flatley

There will be the annual talk of overemphasis and the annual wild demand for tickets. These are two sidelines of colleges' greatest sport, and nobody really pays much attention.

The game itself has been changed. The tendency to open it up and to obviate chances of roughness and physical injury has stamped two or three new rules on the scroll. What these rules mean will only be known after the early games. But they do present a tough problem to coaches and experts, not to mention players.

There has been a steady roar from the old-time coaches about the inclination of the rules committee to try to merge our college pastime with English rugby. This roar has been reasonable and logical. Football has been grafted with basket ball and rugby shoots.

The old-timers complained when the forward pass was introduced. It would ruin the game, remove its ruggedness, etc., etc. But the pass remained, was made quite a weapon by some teams, notably in the West, and now it's as much a part, in the mind of the football savant, as the line plunge or anything else.

This new lateral pass has all the old boys worried. They fear in their hearts that the game will become a matter of speed and niftiness only, with strength and brawn discarded. They are as wrong as they were about the forward toss. That became part of the game, a delightful part, but the teams that succeeded best with it had to have the old essential strength to begin with.

We have an idea that something of the same sort will work out with this lateral heave. It will be tried by the weaker teams as a possible method of licking the big boys. It will succeed now and again. But the game, as the season wears along, will resolve itself into the old battle of endurance and sheer strength.

The team that has the power will discover, after a game or two, how to crash the outfit that neglects fundamentals to perfect a wild and speedy assault. That's what happened to the forward pass in the early days.

There have been games where not a pass was thrown until the shadows were falling and the beaten team was making a last desperate surge. Then, and not till then, did Wild hope flared for a time, where only depression and gloom had prevailed.

So, it would seem, the lateral pass will work out. It will be tried, of course, in the preliminary games. But we will miss our guess if you don't find that the burly, reserve-fortified teams will be winning their games with the same old regularity.

Worry is part of the coach's life. He just has a little bit added this year. That always makes for an exciting campaign. Good teams and coaches invariably rise above the rules

THE NATIONAL LEAGUE RACE IS SO CLOSE THAT IT'S TIME SOMEBODY CALLED IT A SCOTCH FOURSOME.

He doesn't have a dispute and try to settle the issue. He uses baseball and that's no umpire. We need a few.

FRENCH VICTORY WILL BOOST U. S. TENNIS

THE two Bills, Tilden and Johnston, have been beaten and the Davis cup goes to France. Tough on the Bills for the time, but they have surely done their part to keep this land of the free and brave free on the tennis pinnacle. For six years they held the parapets and inevitable age had decreed the dissolution.

France, with its youthful assault, had been threatening and was due to win, which will be a good thing for tennis in this country. The urge to bring the cup back will give the young players an object in life. There are scores of them just about ready to step into the front ranks. Over the recent years they have been discouraged. There was no chance to be a champion, to fight for the real glory, with the two Bills there on the job.

No great athlete can picture anything but the crest for himself. The spark of genius may be present, but it doesn't glow unless the owner has the incentive to fling everything into his attack on the heights.

With the Bills, two of sports' greatest warriors, pressing into the sunset there will be a flock of young tennis stars wheeling onto the stage. France seems foolish to hold that cup over quite a period, but in a year or two at the most America will be back once again with a real threat. The Bills have closed the doors to youthful opportunity for seven years. Now the bars are down

JACK DEMPSEY Tells of Comeback

Dempsey Intends to FIGHT, Not BOX Tunney, He Says

(Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Chicago, Sept. 12.—Gene Tunney told Chicago folks when he arrived here that he came for the purpose of boxing me—not FIGHTING. I take it from Gene's statement that the affair of ours in just to be a "contest" and not a BATTLE.

Tunney's ideas and mine are very different.

I came to this town for the purpose of training to FIGHT Tunney, and when I climb into the ring I intend to make FIGHT of it. That's what I feel the folks are paying a coup of million dollars to see and I'd hate to disappoint them.

The very polite and refined people refer to the fight racket as "the boxing game!" I can't see it that way. I do not believe people of this generation are contributing plenty of cash in the hope of seeing two men stand off, make motions at each other and do some fancy shoveling.

Also at 150 any fouls will pay over from time to time to Tunney. If they aren't used to much of it they won't mind it. Also, if not wasted up considerably and I think that I can, I may get much money with the crowd. So, while boxing a "boxing contest" with Tunney is not to my liking, I'll do it.

THE last three Tunney and I fought it out together we were wild and eager for action. They were disappointed. I was a terrible flop that night as a puncher. I couldn't stop Tunney, although I landed a hundred times or more never flatter. I was the thing became one of those "boxing contest" things, such as Tunney is about.

The crowd went wild. Tunney got the decision on points.

Its disappointment proves plainly that it came not with the idea of seeing two men spar around for ten rounds. It flocked into it to see a real fight. Tunney knows that fans as the ringside that just wanted to see a knockout.

THEY are going to jam the arena in Chicago on the 22nd. Why? Tunney was perhaps answer that by saying that it is because fans are willing to pay a "boxing contest." Let Tunney think that. I am getting out a fight to please the fans, not to please Tunney. I'm not going to box. I'm going to fight. I'm going to make it a fight that will please the fans.

Tunney knows that I am not a boxer. He knows that I am a fighter. He knows that I am not afraid of him. He knows that I am not afraid of anything. He knows that I am not afraid of anything. He knows that I am not afraid of anything.

CAVANAUGH'S EYE TROUBLE NOT SERIOUS

Contrary to early reports, the eye trouble of Matty Cavanaugh, Boston Braves' second baseman, is not serious, and the chances of Manager Wesley Ferrell's being forced to retire from baseball because of it are very slight.

Cavanaugh's eye trouble is a detached retina, which is a serious affair, but one from which recovery is said to be certain. Cavanaugh will be out of the game for about a month, but before he will be able to resume work with the Major league. It is thought that he will be able to return to the game in time to play a few games with the Braves before the season ends.

Dr. Percy R. Bullard, specialist in charge of the City Hospital, who has had charge of Cavanaugh's case, said that the Braves' second baseman will be as well as ever in a short while. Cavanaugh, Dr. Bullard said, is a very healthy young man, and his general condition is excellent, and he will recover from the detached retina in a few weeks.

Inside Golf

By Chester Horton

Body lunging in the forward swing of the universal fault among golfers, plus the usually quick pronate from the players effort to keep the ball low, instead of letting the club do it, is responsible for the most baffling shots and the quick pull hook. Body shifting back and letting the clubhead do the work is the most astounding common partisans of golf have to cope with. I will show you a method of getting the body out of the way of the swing and also how to put to work every muscle in the body in the proper sequence.

GENE TUNNEY World's Heavyweight Champion

Champion Admits He's Jack's Nemesis and Cautions Tiger to Beware of His Right Sock

(Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Lake Villa, Ill., Sept. 12.—It's about all over now. My last workout demonstrated that I wasn't wrong back here in Speculator, N. Y., last Spring, when I insisted upon starting my training months before the fight and working up gradually to the proper pitch, instead of plunging into a hysterical siege of intensive boxing and perspiring a few weeks before the contest.

There is going to be no last-minute hysteria for me. I've kept the same pace I mentioned the Summer, and I will continue to hold it for the next eleven days

I AM, in a sense, Dempsey's bugaboo. He was made to order me and my style and I'm his afternoon's exercise in the gymnasium.

Nothing could save Dempsey from me. I'm not going to say that I'm going to knock him out, but I'm going to give him a fight that will be remembered for a long time. I'm going to make him extend himself to the limit.

I AM not afraid of Dempsey's punch, but I have a healthy respect for it. It's a foolish fighter who is afraid of anything. I'm not afraid of Dempsey's punch, but I have a healthy respect for it. It's a foolish fighter who is afraid of anything.

There is no doubt in my mind—and I have thought of it a dozen times in the past year—that if the Philadelphia fight had gone five rounds longer I would have knocked Jack Dempsey out.

It is knowledge is going to give me the necessary edge in our coming encounter—an edge that will more than make up for the weight I'm going to lose. I figure I might lose the former champion. Dempsey will probably go in a fighting mood, but I don't think he will be able to weather my attack.

I'm not going to say that I'm going to knock him out, but I'm going to give him a fight that will be remembered for a long time. I'm going to make him extend himself to the limit.

Red Chapman Gets His Shot at Title Tonight

Philadelphia, Sept. 12 (I.N.S.).—Philadelphia has its chance to claim a champion of the world tonight when Benny Bass, "Billy Penn's own boy," meets Red Chapman of Boston at the Sesqui Stadium in an attempt to settle the much-disputed featherweight championship.

The winner of the bout tonight will be recognized as the world's champion, the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission has announced.

Bass, one of the leading contenders for the lightweight championship, is among the best fighters in the Boston redhead, however, has a large following, and many believe his superior boxing skill will carry him safely through the ten rounds against the slugging local boy.

Seating arrangements have been completed for 40,000 spectators, and tickets are selling rapidly. An attendance between 40,000 and 50,000 is expected.

MELLO AND BROWN IN BATTLE

Lowell Rivals Top Bargain Card at the Arena Tonight; Mitchell Meets K. O. Samson

By JACK CONWAY

FLAMING YOUTH will carry the torch at the Suffolk A. A.'s fifty-round bargain boxing bill at the New Boston Arena tonight.

Al Mello, twenty-one-year-old Lowell welterweight sensation, will swap punches with Bobby Brown, another Spindle City youngster, in the feature ten round tussle.

Jack Conway

This match has been hanging fire for more than a year. Mello was the first of these two aspirants for ring greatness to batter his way into the first heights. Then came Brown, to outpoint over Paul Doyle and Meyer Cohen, establishing himself as Cauliflower Alley's favorite.

For months Brown bounded Mello, but did not receive a fumble. Finally it could no longer avoid Brown and, although retiring as prettily as ever, Mello was nabbed.

Mello and Brown both report they are in fine condition and ready to go.

It is likely that Billy Murphy another Lowell boy, will be signed to tackle the winner of tonight's show. Murphy recently trimmed his way to a win over Jack Zivic.

ROY MITCHELL, knockout artist from Nova Scotia is crowding Mello and Brown as far as public interest is concerned. He is slated to meet Sailor K. O. Samson of Philadelphia in the semi-final of eight rounders.

Mitchell, the latest of the colored boxing stars is considered by many keen judges of ring affairs as a better battler than Tiger Flowers. He is a much better puncher than Flowers and does second only to his time clowning while in the ring.

Arthur Flynn of Lawrence and Bob Lawrie of Scotland will also step eight frames.

ANOTHER representative of Flaming Youth on tonight's card who is going to make a name for himself in the ring is Jackie Donahue, formerly of New York, but now eating his bread and beans over in South Boston. Donahue is paired with Pete Chico of Charlestown in a six-round bout.

Donan is in a featherweight and as an amateur won more than 200 starts. Since joining the ranks of the money chasers, Jackie has bowled over 15 opponents. He two New England starts ended with his scoring knockouts. Chico is a rough, tough little Filipino boy and will give Donahue a real test.

Larry Brianolla of Cambridge, who has a punch like a heavyweight, will whirl into action with Buddy Jenkins of Lynn in another six round number.

There will also be three fours. Joe Tavernerl of Cambridge will swap punches with Owen Travers of Worcester, Tom Murphy of Marlboro will tackle Tla Sullivan of Cambridge, while John Orell of Cambridge will step to bat with George Finch of Gloucester.

With the seats only 50 cents to $3 it looks as though the Arena would be jammed to the doors.

Bargain priced boxing is popular in this man's town.

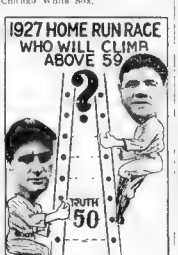
RED SOX REST UP FOR TWIN OFFERING

Blue Monday the bane of a home team's life, will be observed today by the Red Sox as a day of rest rather than of bats. Not that the Sox offend any more than any other team but the fact is a home day team layoff off ever Sunday is off form on Monday.

So today being an off day here in Boston, one of the few of the base ball year, Bill Carrigan's men will rest up for their final stretch of home games which carries them against the St. Louis Browns and Chicago White Sox.



La Coste Defends U. S. Single Net Title

By MALCOLM ROY
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 12.—Rene LaCoste, the 23-year-old French youth who by virtue of his astounding victory over Big Bill Tilden 2nd in the Davis Cup matches, stands as the colossus of the lawn tennis world of 1927, takes the court again today to defend his title of American champion in the men's national singles championships, which begin on the turf courts of the West Side Tennis Club here.

La Coste, fresh from his triumph over the veteran Tilden in Philadelphia on Saturday, so far overshadows the many other players, drawn from all quarters of the world to battle for the crown of American tennis, that his ultimate victory is conceded on all sides.

Tilden and the entire field is powerful enough to stand toe to toe with the smashing Parisian in a set or 3 and even Tilden has been forced to bow twice before the inexorable sway of La Coste in the last few months, once at St. Cloud in June and again in the decisive match for the Davis Cup.

But Tilden, who is at the top of the upper half of the draw while La Coste enjoys the post of honor at the bottom of the lower half, has been through such a terrific campaign in the last ten days that his crazed physique may even fail to carry him as far as the finals.

Tilden's path has been made infinitely smoother, however, by the withdrawal from the tournament of Henri Cochet, the little hornet of the invading forces, who toppled the ruthless American at Wimbledon early in the Summer to prove that his victory over him in the challenge round of the singles championship here last year was not a fluke.

However with Cochet and Jacques Brugnon out of the tournament and the threat that Jean Borotra, another of the French racquetiers, will default if he is still in the running on Friday when he is scheduled to sail for France with the two first mentioned, the championships lose some of their appeal from an international point of view.

Little Bill Johnston, U. S. Navy 20, Francis T. Hunter, Clarence J. Griffin, Manuel Alonso and other American stars will be on hand but George M. Lott Jr., of Chicago, has been forced to withdraw because of illness.

Tilden Willing to Go Abroad for Cup Tourney

New York, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—If the United States sends a team abroad next year to regain the Davis cup, lost to the French, "Big Bill" Tilden "will be very glad" to be a member of it, he said today before starting play in the national singles championship.

Instead of turning professional as he had contemplated if defense of the Davis cup had been successful, Tilden declared he will be entire v at the service of the United States Lawn Tennis Association in 1928.

With such younger stars as George Lott and John Doeg, Tilden will be ready for the long trial of qualifying play, which must be traversed next year before the United States can challenge the Frenchmen for the cup.

DELANEY READY FOR RISKO BOUT WEDNESDAY

New York, Sept. 12.—Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn., former world's light heavyweight champion, continued training at his Jersey camp in preparation for his match with Johnny Risko at Cleveland, September 14. Delaney is being pointed for a bout with the winner of the Sharkey-Paulino battle here on November 18. A decision over Risko is needed to clinch negotiations.

SCHOOL TEAMS WORK HARD FOR OPENING

By JOE CASHMAN

Bay State schoolboy gridders this week will begin to "knock off the rust" or, if they have been playing all Summer, to get into shape for the opening of school. As the high school youths didn't return to the classrooms until Wednesday, they had to wait until today for their first taste of football.

Several prominent Greater Boston high school coaches have new combos this season and their work will be followed with interest by schoolboy fans.

John L. Sullivan succeeds the late A. W. Dick Dean at Newton High. He faces a tough job in turning out a team up to the standard set by the lamented Abe. He'll be handicapped made so clear by the resignation of Frank Spain captain-elect of the team, who has decided not to play football this year because of a weak ankle.

Thomas Mealey is another new mentor serving his first year in the Suburban League. He succeeds Jo Kelliher, who has gone to the coach of Rindge Tech. He has put the squad out for several days.

Another Sullivan, surname William, has succeeded Ed Peabody at Peabody High and is working out with a big squad.

Arlington and Watertown High are other nearby schools that have appointed new coaches. Charles Downes, former graduate manager of athletics at Tufts, is directing Arlington squad, while the Wall brothers, Ed. and John, have succeeded Jack MacDonald at Watertown.

A Story of Sylvia Bryant, Stenographer, Among the Money Crowd

Joyce Ackerman, society woman and wife of Vance Ackerman, rich broker, appeals to a mutual friend, Alexander Ladd, a successful lawyer, to help her in her battle with Margot Liggett, who has won her husband's affections. Ladd persuades Mrs. Ackerman to install Sylvia Bryant, his stenographer, in her home as her social secretary. Ackerman admires Sylvia's beauty and charm, and Stuart Gifford, his cousin, falls in love with her. He makes light of marriage and she refuses to let him kiss her. Mrs. Ackerman confesses to Sylvia that she hoped her presence would aid in keeping her husband away from Margot. Sylvia overhears Margot's divorced husband threaten to kill Ackerman who defies him and says he is going out with Margot that very night. To avert a tragedy Sylvia begs him to take her to dinner. She tells Mrs. Ackerman what she is doing. Ackerman takes her to a revue.

Afterward Ackerman is stabbed to death. Sylvia flees and appeals to Gifford for help.

Ladd tells Sylvia she is in a dangerous position and he will devote himself to the task of getting her out of it. Intimates that he cares for her.

He gives her back her old job in his office with increased pay and has a row with his conservative law partners.

Sylvia gets warning from an old friend that she may be suspected as Ackerman's slayer.

CHAPTER XLII.

"YOU are a darling, Sylvia!"

Stuart Gifford's eyes across the table were alive with feeling. Sylvia was not deceived—she understood that he was trying to justify a case of jumpy nerves—a lapse of chivalry for which he was heartily ashamed.

"You put too much importance on what happened that night," she said. "If you hadn't brought it up, I'd have forgotten it."

"But you don't believe now that I cried a cat?"

"Of course not."

"Sylvia—" His voice hung over the pronunciation of her name as though were a sweet morsel " Sylvia do know how much I care for you? will you let me tell you that, too, at once?"

Her feminine instinct of resistance asserted itself. "Don't talk to me like that, please!" she said, a trifle sharply. At the same time, she was adding to herself that love declarations from anyone as handsome, as romantic, as Stuart Gifford could never be unpleasant to any girl.

"If you just weren't so old-fashioned me," he said. "I think I could open up my heart—I think I might even communicate some of my love to you, dear But I've never been able to say what is in my heart. I talk a lot but actually I'm quite When I try to open up somehow you seem to draw a curtain between us."

He was foolish, Sylvia told him. She was neither harsh nor cold to war drum. But she added she didn't see why their friendship couldn't remain—just friendship.

"Because I'm wild about you, Sylvia" he declared stoutly. "I can't be satisfied with just plain friendship when everything in me is yearning for love—for all of you."

She was not, quite, able to take him seriously. "Don't you think you are just building all this up in your mind? Sort of auto-suggestion?"

His eyes grew miserable at her lack of understanding. "Always that curtain between us—that coldness!" he said. "Doesn't it mean anything to you that I think about you all day, that I go to sleep with your face before my eyes and wake out of dreams about you? Don't you know that I've tried a dozen times to give you up?"

Sylvia said she hadn't known anything of the kind. Remotely, she was a little hurt.

"I've tried to give you up but I can't," Gifford declared. "I've told myself over and over that it was hopeless—that I couldn't move you. But right down in the mountains you did don't really respond—and I told myself I was all kinds of a fool—that you didn't give a damn about me."

"But I do care about you," she said, impulsively.

If there was an encouragement in this he rode over it, almost angrily. "Oh, yes, I know you like me well enough, I suppose. But that isn't what I mean. If you really cared for me—if I had a chance in the world—there wouldn't be any doubt about it. While thing is utterly destroying my pride, Sylvia. I seem to have no shame—I reveal out my feelings. I expose what's in my heart—and nothing happens."

She wondered what he really wanted to happen. So far he had said nothing about marriage. It was possible, she realized, that he might have another idea—another possibility—in his mind. But she was stirred.

"I don't know what to say to you, Stuart," she admitted.

"Don't say you love me if you don't. Please don't kid me, Sylvia—I couldn't stand it."

"I won't," she said, firmly.

"When I look at your lips I'd give everything I've got on earth to kiss them—my hope of heaven. I see a hundred other girls, a thousand on the street and they are only empty shells to me. I look at them to see if there is any possible resemblance to you. There never is. You stand apart, alone. There's something magic about you, Sylvia—a finer clay. No one, in my whole life, ever affected me like this before."

He was filled with an emotion that gave a tone to his voice, a cadence, as though he were reading poetry. The illumination in his eyes was glowing, a concentration of desire that shone with compelling force. Listening to him, Sylvia heard what he said with the receptive attention she might have given to an actor on the stage. She was held, fixed with inescapable interest, but it was not because she believed that there was any actual meaning behind his words, his curious feeling.

He was so taut, so alert, that he might have been reading her heart.

"You can't understand, can you, that I really mean this?" he asked, a trifle sadly.

"I know you think you mean it," she admitted.

Between his dark, level brows a small disconsolate scowl appeared. "I'm trying to tell you with human language about an emotion that can't hardly be expressed in words. I say the wrong things. I stumble and fumble to show you what's in my heart. And it all comes out distorted. Perhaps, it sounds cheap—like I'm lying. I can't tell about that. All I know is that I can't have a moment's happiness when I'm away from you. If you hated me, it would still be a pleasure just to hear you."

Their food partly eaten, the ten in their cups lay neglected before them and turning cold. A waiter, observing them, kept discreetly away. By some miracle of concentrated attention, of sentiment they were alone—oblivious of the rest of the world in a sense respect, at least. Sylvia was aware Stuart Gifford had accomplished something. He had compelled her to a close realization of his own burning ache in the heart. She could not dismiss what he was saying as a joke.

"Love shouldn't make anybody unhappy," she said, slowly. "And you are unhappy."

"That's true," he agreed. "How can I be happy when I want you and I haven't got you. Nothing else but you matters in the whole world —absolutely nothing. The only thing that is of any importance on this earth is that stirring, that welling up of sensation, that collects itself around the human heart."

"That's true—I believe that," Sylvia said.

He lit a cigarette deliberately. "Tell me—do you feel any of it—any of it at all?"

For a moment, a stretching space of time, Sylvia was silent. Then,

"When you make it so—so powerful I can't help but feel some of it, Stuart. It frightens me—it's beginning to affect me."

Scarlett Attempts to Kiss Becky, But She Protests Firmly

"You don't think I'm a beggar, do you?"

"Taxicab—" gasped Becky to Scarlett.

"What do you think I picked you up for?" asked Scarlett.

'Becky'; A New Serial of a Great Love in Hub Theatrical Life

merriment of New Year's, a low, but unmistakable sound, a sort of repeated gurgle, came from the dark mass.

Now Mr. Scarlett was superstitious, so although he would have preferred going by, and putting the hunched black figure of misery out of his mind, it was his conviction that if he did so good fortune would ignore him during all the coming year. Therefore he stopped, twisted at his mustache, and whistled faintly. The figure remained motionless.

Mr. Scarlett put his hand in his pocket, and turned away. The next moment there was a little tinkling sound, and, out of the corner of his eye, Mr. Scarlett could see a shiny new quarter, face up on the wet doorsteps, glittering faintly. Mr. Scarlett continued observing and saw a small hand, very white in that dimness, but which in the daylight, would have looked red and chapped, cover the shining circle of silver.

Then, knowing his tribute to the goddess of ill-fortune to be paid, he would have pursued his wanderings, had not a small voice directly behind him suddenly spoken.

"Mister—say Mister!"

Scarlett swung about and faced the huddled figure with an air of astonishment. A white oval peered at him out of the darkness. And, from the white oval, the voice came again.

"Mister—did you drop a quarter!"

Scarlett's amazement was now genuine.

"You picked it up, didn't you!" The white oval nodded. "Well, finding is keeping, you know," Scarlett concluded, suddenly feeling for his watch, which he had been obtained on precisely that principle.

"Say, you don't think I'm a beggar, do you?" The black bundle straightened suddenly, the dim oval of face came into the light, and Scarlett saw two large eyes smudged with black shadows and bright with moisture, and Scarlett saw white teeth pressing on a red underlip to still its quivering.

The girl held out her hand defiantly. "I never begged for anything in my life, and I don't intend starting now," she said. "Thanks for your good intentions and—" the hand trembled; the underlip trembled—"And a Happy New Year," the girl ended, swallowing a sob.

"Now look here," said Scarlett. "There's a saying that false pride goeth before a fall. I never took you for a beggar, just a discouraged kid, see? I'll help you."

"Listen, Mister Man, I'm not in a humor for kidding."

"Do you ever read fairy tales, young lady?"

"Yeh, sure. Every morning while I'm having breakfast in bed. And I spend my nights in my library—maybe you seen it, up on Marlboro street."

"Well Cinderella, I propose to play Prince Charming and take you to dinner."

The girl started back abruptly.

"You cut that out. I'm not that way, see?"

"Oh, don't you like food? Pretty grey oysters on ice . . . ? Nice thick soup . . . ? A big steak with crisp fried onions and brown mealy potatoes . . . ? Asparagus with . . ."

"Oh Lord!" interrupted the girl "gimme strength to stay hungry!"

"Good hot steaming coffee," said Scarlett, "And I won't even hold your hand."

"Can't you leave me alone . . ."

"White bread and plenty of butter . . ."

"Butter!" The girl shuddering suddenly, put her hand to her mouth. "Butter . . . Oh poppa!" And then, turning to Scarlett with streaming eyes, "Butter's too much. I give up."

Scarlett whistled shrilly, and a taxi swung around the corner.

"Taxi cab . . ." gasped the girl, "I never—" she broke off. "You'll be good, won't you now?"

"Sure," said Scarlett absently, his eyes fixed on her quivering lips. "Sure . . . trust me or my name's not Dan Scarlett."

And he led her to the waiting cab which whisked them off to a cafe.

"There's a mirror. Just look at yourself and see if I'm right, Cinderella."

Scarlett spoke from the door of the private room to which he had taken his hungry charge—with the excuse that her appearance would prohibit their entrance into the restaurant below.

The girl ran one hand through her short black hair and observed gravely to her image: "Becky McCloskey, I hereby name and christen thee—a piece of cheese." After which, making a profound bow to her image, she turned her back on it.

"Nevertheless?" said Scarlett, straightening his necktie and smoothing his mustache, "you are a very pretty girl."

The smile faded. "Here's the waiter," she murmured, quickly retiring behind a chair so that this amazing attendant in immaculate evening clothes might not be grieved by her shabby appearance. She added, regally: "You order, Mr. Scarlett. I don't mind what I eat."

Mr. Scarlett ordered, lavishly, and presently the immaculate waiter departed ,and he was alone with Becky. Having placed her wet coat on the radiator, and induced her to swallow part of the contents of a leather-covered flask to still her recurrent shivers, he seated himself comfortably—opposite the mirror—and suggested—"Now tell me about yourself!"

Becky clasped her hands behind her head. "Well, in the first place," she began animably, "I'm a million dollar daughter but I forgot my sables today, and lost my Rolls Royce in the rain. Aside from that I live in a palace in Brookline, Over and beyond which little facts I have my room rent paid up to tomorrow, after which, being tired of this gloomy climate, me and me pet will go west for the Winter, ah . . . by way of the Charles River, probably. Now let's talk about you. Seems there'll be more to say."

"I," said Mr. Scarlett, "am a gentleman connected with the theatre."

"Actor!" exclaimed Becky, her eyes opening wide. "I should of guessed."

"Connected," Scarlett contradicted, with just a shade of coolness "With the . . . er? . . . business end. Advertising, in fact, for Dan Scarlett Productions." The statement having produced its effect Scarlett swallowed what was left in the flask, and added impressively, "Acting is not the profession for me."

"I wish it was mine," Becky remarked wistfully. Then she grinned. "Say, I'd make a swell trumpet queen wouldn't I? Specially in this outfit. But I can sing, Mr. Scarlett."

"They all can," said gentleman, displeased by the turn of the conversation. He added, however, "We'll see. Maybe I can do something for you—if you're nice. A pretty girl can go a long way—if she's nice."

The waiter entered, bearing a heavily laden tray.

"Oh, Mr Scarlett, you're awfully good," murmured Becky.

Dan Scarlett was amused by Becky's useless attempts to look blase with calm upon any item of their menu. If there had been doubt in his mind before, there was none now—the pale and blue-eyed girl attacked meat after the fashion of one who finds water in a desert — every mouthful brought tears to her eyes. At last—

"It don't seem right to waste what's left," she said gravely, putting down her fork "But I can't eat another mouthful. She looked down at her hands. "I dunno how to thank you," she went on "but I —well honest, I haven't been so warm for a month. "I'll tell you the truth," she went on leaning impulsively toward him. "I was fearfully hungry, see? What I'd of done if you hadn't been so good I don't know. I want to say I think you're a great guy and . . ." She clasped her hands against her breast and looked up at Scarlett. "And terrible chivalrous," she concluded.

"Gentlemen are, my dear," said Mr. Scarlett, rather heavily, setting down his glass.

"There's not lig a girl like me can do for a man like you." Becky went on, and Scarlett noticed that her skin, sharply defined against the black crescents of her hair, was flushing softly. "But I have something I had ever since I was a baby, and it's worth a lot to me." From the inside of her blouse she took out a flat glass locket on a ribbon, a tawdry, cheap thing, containing a few locks of faded hair. "I'd like to give you this," she said, "for luck, and to show you I'm thankful."

Scarlett looked at the thing, and raised his eyebrows.

"My dear child," he said, "I wouldn't take your keepsake for the world. Your charming company has been a pleasure. I know we'll be friends."

"Sure we'll be friends," Becky, scarlet with shame that her thanks had been so negligible, allowed him to take her hands in his. "That's a bargain."

"Well my dear," murmured Mr. Scarlett, "shall we seal it with a kiss?"

Very politely, Becky turned one flushed cheek toward her protector, whereupon her protector, not being a psychologist for all that he lived by his wits, leaned forward, brushed the flushed cheek with his blonde mustache, and suddenly slipping his arm around Becky's waist, pressed his mouth against hers.

For a second there was utter stillness in the room. Outside the orchestra blared cheerily, and down below gay couples laughed aloud and sped time gaily.

Meanwhile, in the private room with its ornate mirror, one Becky McCloskey—shocked, disappointed, but fed at last—succeeded in freeing

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

CHARACTER is a wonderful asset in happy love and marriage But there is another requisite just as essential to successful romance. The second essential is charm.

"Blue" is a girl who 's absolutely strong when it comes to character. But can it be she neglects the little graces of life which go to make up charm?

"Dear Miss Fairfax," she writes:

"Why do some girls enjoy all that life has in store for them while others suffer so? This has often puzzled me.

"Ever since the friendship between me and a young man one year my senior was shattered I've been so blue. I kept company with this young man for about two years. During this time our friendship was broken up three times, but neither of these three interruptions was caused by quarrels.

"He never showed any great affection for me, but in spite of this I loved him.

"BLUE."

YOU have listed a number of things you do not do, my dear. Tell me, now, what do you do to keep things agreeable, gay and entertaining for your friends?

Do you sing gay little songs? Do you play a ukulele? Do you swim and play tennis? Do you dress becomingly? Are you enchanting? Damn? Do you keep everyone about you happy and content by your infectious good spirits and light-hearted jests and laughter?

Clear, White Skin For Every Woman

The modern athletic girl never fears tan, sunburn, freckles or other skin troubles. Since she uses mercolized wax regularly she can go swimming, motoring, golfing, camping or hiking in any climate without inconvenience. To use ponsets makes to peel away the outer layer of skin, and with it pimples, freckles, blotches, liver spots, and other defects go. Get an ounce from any druggist and use as directed. In just a few days the under skin appears beautifully soft, white and youthful. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines, use this face lotion: 2 ounces powdered saxolite and 2 half pint witch hazel.

LUCKY MAURINE; SHE'S GOING TO HAVE A BABY!

His child.

Maurine seldom mentioned Baron Littlejoy. But sometimes she would stop in the midst of her work, chin on sweeper handle, and meditate. Her face would flush and she would pant excitedly. Was she thinking of the Baron or of Vivian Dangerfield? Who knows?

The Autumn of the third year came and went;
The mild but violent Winter was half spent.
When this brief message came across the sea:
"Maurine, my darling! Come you here to me.
O, my sweet!
This heart of mine grows fainter with each beat—
Too long the truth from you I have concealed.
Come take the babe I leave to you.
Yours, Helen Dangerfield."

So Maurine, at last, was to have a baby—the gift of Helen Dangerfield—her so-called friend, who had wedded Vivian Dangerfield. Helen was that kind—she would give you her last cent. Maurine kept reading the telegram over and over. She had never dreamed she would get a souvenir from the Dangerfield Trevor (or Trevor) affair. Lucky Maurine!

LUCK OR JUDGMENT

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

WHEN Donnie was two years old he put his little chair up in his high chair, climbed atop of the two of them and tumbled out on his head. His mother had to call the doctor and Donnie still bears a scar on his face from that fall.

When he was five, he climbed up on the side of the coal house, slipped and cut his face on a nail in the wall. That scar also remains.

When he was twelve years old he conceived the brilliant idea of jumping from the top of his own home to the top of a neighbor's house a few feet away. In that fall he broke his arm.

All in between times he was having similar adventures that left temporary scars in one place or another.

That's why his mother and father beaan telling each other that Donnie was the unluckiest child either of them had ever seen. Of course the boy heard them talking about his bad luck, and, of course, he assumed the martyred air of the fellow who was born unlucky.

They did not think to tell him that his bad luck was due entirely to his lack of judgment and caution. They attributed his hurts entirely to luck. Poor luck! How many luckless failures have been blamed on luck!

When Donnie reached the meeting place thirty minutes late and found that the rest of the Boy Scouts had gone on to camp without him he said, "That's just my luck!"

As he drifted through his school days and lost this or that promotion through his own negligence he thought that his luck was still playing tricks on him.

He had that idea firmly fixed in his consciousness. And anybody knows that if you expect misfortunes, they will come. If you insist upon being in the discard, fortune will leave you there. If you start a string of forces working against you, by your own suggestions those forces will continue to work against you. Life is like a game of cards.

There is something magical about success that breeds further success, and the same is true of failure. That's why your child should be to laugh at Fate's little tricks, as they come. The boy or girl who keeps plugging and maintains a hopeful attitude is more than apt to win. Tell your child that and make him believe it.

TEACH GENEROSITY

By LUCY LOWELL

SOMETIMES I wonder if, in our wish to progress, we do not pay too much attention to the circumstances which seem to obstruct our way.

It is one thing to note an obstacle and allow for it; this is a sort of passive resistance which can waste neither time nor energy.

But it is quite another thing to endow the obstacle with the power to hold us back and, therefore, to plan elaborate and intricate campaigns for outwitting it.

It is a wise person who knows when to ignore a thing; often enough this method proves to be not only the diplomatic but the simplest one.

I am reminded of the advice Abraham Lincoln offered a young man who wished to attain success:

"The way for a young man to rise is to improve himself every way he can, never suspecting that anybody wishes to hinder him. Allow me to assure you that suspicion and jealousy never did help any man in any situation. There may sometimes be ungenerous attempts to keep a young man down and they will succeed, too, if he allows his mind to be diverted from its true channel to brood over the attempted injury. Cast about, and see if this feeling has not injured every person you have known to fall into it."

In other words, ignore the obstacles—such obstacles as jealousy and suspicion, for example—and they are powerless to harm you, for you give them no power in your own mind.

Another saying of the Emancipator along the same line is this: "It is difficult to make a man miserable while he feels he is worthy of himself and claims kindred to the great God who made him."

The man who feels worthy of himself and his Creator surely never will by whatever obstruction circumstances may put across his way.

THREE MINUTE TRIPS

By TEMPLE MANNING

FINLAND has a population of 2,000,000 full-blooded Finns, besides one-fourth that number of other nationalities.

The Finns are a stalwart people, not wanting in intellectual vigor. There is a great deal of Scandinavian blood in the race, and large numbers of them speak the Swedish language. Their national tongue is at present gaining ground, and is expected soon to be their universal medium of speech.

Common sights in Finland today are tents and huts made of skins stitched together with needles of sharp bones; or dugouts with only the ground above for a roof. Early relics of snowshoes and sledges still exist and are sights of interest to the traveler.

Magic, sorcery and general superstition are still in active practice and belief among them, although the larger part of the populace has adopted Christianity. A curious version of the bear is prevalent in this country. Ursus takes the rank of a high dignity.

Their sorcerers are admitted the power of making good or bad weather by means of magical spells and incantations, and the sorcerer himself is a novel character, being half man and half woman. He can take his eye out and eat it. He can allow a bullet to go through his head, and suffer no pain or injury. Tradition has it that the conduct of this witch doctor is that of a maniac, and that he is raving and vehement; that he "foams at the mouth and nie hair stands straight on end" when the spirit possesses him.

The Finns as a whole are a polished, intelligent race, and their land has schools throughout. The intensity with which superstition clings to some of its people is therefore the more surprising.

The country has a national press. It experiences little of the scarcity of material wants such as food and the necessary comforts of life. Its people are prosperous.

FADS AND FASHIONS

Taking a Savage Pride in sticking feathers in their head-dress was an Indian trait of chieftain and squaw.

Seeking history for inspiration, jewelry designers have designed hat pins and dress brooches of crystal to represent feathers. Such a glittering quill has a central vein of the same color as the hat or frocks with which it is worn.

Glittering Like Gold or silver, the new "goldskin" or "silverskin" satin makes the smartest overblouse to wear with black velvet skirts. Soft, supple and shimmering, these blouses strike a note of youthful simplicity, and several they are worn in collarless types, newest evening slippers, for they model with the boyish Peter Pan collar.

Foremost for Fall to wear with the strongly favored jersey frocks are little hose of lacy weave. These novelty hose are woven in small, inconspicuous patterns that will undoubtedly appeal to fashionable wearers who favor conservative instead of extreme modes.

A Tale of Rat Tail Fringe is interestingly told by the deep, turnback cuffs of fabric gloves, recently imported from France. The gloves are of a light beige, while the fringe and stitching are of a contrasting, rich brown.

THE MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By HELEN ROWLAND

THERE are two kinds of husbands—Providers and Pets.

* * *

The Good Provider is a fur-buying animal, a cash register, and a producer of bacon, bonds, bungalows and automobiles.

* * *

He is useful, but not necessarily decorative. He possesses all of the solid qualities, but few of the lighter graces. He doesn't NEED them!

* * *

The Pet, on the other hand, must know a thousand parlor tricks and respond to the touch, like a bridle-wise pony. He must be able to dance divinely, order a perfect dinner, run any make of car, shake the cocktails, wipe the dishes, take the Pekingese for a walk, and boost his wife's game.

* * *

He must wear his clothes with dignity and dash, keep his chin shaved and his haberdashery smartly immaculate, jolly the servants, play a good game of bridge, receive his wife's guests with a graceful flourish, and act as a dinner table decoration.

* * *

He should cultivate a taste for poetry and chamber music, practice a perfect "line," and know just when to bring home flowers.

* * *

Some men, alas, are neither Providers nor Pets. They are born to be eternal bachelors!

* * *

They are too lazy, too inefficient or too selfish to provide for any woman, and they would not WORK for the best woman alive. On the other hand, they have neither the talents nor the graces of a pet. They are too unwieldy, too clumsy, too phlegmatic or too self-indulgent to waltz around after any woman and play gallant to her vanity and whims.

* * *

They are not even good-natured or sweet-tempered, which is the primary requisite of a Pet, but live entirely to satisfy their palates, doze, read the newspapers and smoke pipes or black cigars. They soon lose their figures and acquire a double chin, a set of habits and a chronic grouch.

* * *

Lastly, there are a few rare men, who are both Good Providers and possessed of all the charms and accomplishments of the Perfect Pet.

* * *

But, by some sad trick of fate, these desirable and delightful men always seem to be married to little, domestic "gray mice" who do not "appreciate" them.

* * *

At least, that's what they SAY—when they are looking in your eyes!

RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

UNDER the trees where the shadows dance lights on the bluebird's wings glimmer and glance and the brook gleams brown; this is the spot that the children love, rustle of wings and of leaves above; swing up, swing down! Mers waits the swing that the farmer made, lightly it journeys through sun, through shade, now fast, now slow. Thrilling, such travel, beyond compare, breathless the rush of the fragrant air; swing high, swing low! Joy of the woodland's high, twining boughs, joy of the mating birds' tender vows, it all is here; joy that the earth hums, but does not reveal, this is the joy that the children feel; swing, far, swing near! Nothing but gladness the whole day through, rapture of living when all is new, green fields, blue sky; this is the spot where the children's mirth, tinkling like silver bells, brightens the earth; swing low, swing high!

MEDBURY SAYS—

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

HUNDREDS of landlords have started a campaign against vestibule vultures. A vestibule vulture is a bird that tries to steal hugs and kisses in apartment house lobbies instead of going to a movie or some other proper place.

ONE fellow says he can't help himself. He's going with a Scotch girl and she likes to sit in the foyer to keep from wearing out her father's sofa.

AND necking is just as enjoyable no matter who owns the couch.

HE doesn't like to spoon in doorways, but every time he takes his sweetheart to a movie, she insists on looking at the picture.

HE hates to watch John Gilbert when he's got ideas of his own.

HE enjoys the orchestra, but he can make better overtures himself.

A MAN said he went dizzy the other evening trying to steal a kiss in a revolving door.

THE girl had him doing so many revolutions he thought it was ladies' night in the Rotary Club.

HE says that after this he's going to practice his spooning on a merry-go-round.

HE prefers the homes with the old-fashioned doors; the kind that the girl's mother used to slam in your face.

LOBBY petters are as thick in some apartment houses that the tenants have to use the servants' ap-

ONE Lothario who didn't have a car, spent the evening taking his girl up and down in the elevator.

SHE finally told him she'd like a little more privacy; so he took her riding on the dumb waiter.

HE'S the kind of a fellow who'd throw her down the laundry-chute and tell her she was on a roller-coaster.

MOST of these birds are so used to spooning in lobbies that they wouldn't know how to act in a living-room. They think that a parlor is a place where you hold a wake.

NECKING is a venture and they like to get in on the ground floor.

LOVE-MAKING is their business and every vestibule is a home office.

TENANTS are complaining. They hate to pay two or three hundred dollars a month to live in a swell apartment house and then have a lot of strangers come along and get all the privileges.

Why Europeans Dislike Us; Sacco Case Merely a Peg

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—To put it mildly, Americans are not liked abroad. Resentment in Britain is usually kept under control, but in France we are several times rudely jostled on the sidewalks, and one employe of an American company, who wears a uniform with the company's name on it, is told he must not be seen on the streets.

B. C. Forbes

America than the ill-starred Sacco-Vanzetti muddle. Although only the worst elements took part in anti-American demonstrations, other Europeans condemned this country roundly for the course followed toward two convicted murderers. In effect, they said: "If these men were guilty of murder they should have been hung promptly. If there were any doubts about their guilt they should have been summarily given a new trial and their fate settled one way or the other. Your law courts apparently are a farce."

We had not been in London an hour when we ran into a squad of mounted policemen, accidentally behind them came a motley crowd. At first we were puzzled. Then we inclined a bow. "Fuller Is a Murderer!" Round the corner came hundreds and hundreds of marchers—probably a mile of them. One "float" represented an electric chair; Fiascadde and hanging condemned America in the harshest tones. Nor did the British government escape. One placard bore the words, "Down with Baldwin!"

A ride through Hyde Park, London's famous open-air forum, found a dozen or more groups haranguing hob crators. They ran the gamut from religion to anarchy. On the outskirts of some of the gatherings strolled unconcernedly a policeman absolutely indifferent to the most fiery denunciations of King, country and capital.

The British are wise in that they let anybody and everybody blow off all the steam they wish without attempting to interfere. Agitators can say anything. But let them make one move to do anything illegal and they are instantly arrested. Britain believes in unlimited freedom of speech, but not in unlimited freedom of action.

My own—perhaps superficial—analysis of the foreign Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations was and is that the participants cared little about the fate of the pair, but used the case as a pretext to give vent to animosity toward America and Americans. The more dignified and responsible newspapers and statesmen ate as rule in their comments, yet between the lines one detected that they rejoiced to find a peg on which to hang criticism of us.

* * *

Europe's unfriendly attitude toward America is based on our unmatched wealth and prosperity; on what they insist are exaggerated ideas our harsh war-debt policy; on the loud boasting America is said to indulge in about our having won the war; on the swagger and ostentation and, sometimes rudeness of American tourists; on the wholesale purchases by Americans of European castles, priceless paintings and other works of art; on what they regard as our extortionate tariff imposts; and, in certain countries, on our curtailment of immigration.

Is there any remedy?

49 BAY STATE UTILITIES ARE TRUST-RULED

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

Certainly it is a notable development in the Massachusetts public utility situation that 49 of our public utilities are trust-ruled today. The people of Massachusetts cities and towns with electric and gas service. The ruling organization is the Massachusetts Utilities Investment Trust, with more than 4,800 Bay State stockholders. A great deal has been said on Beacon Hill and elsewhere about the danger of "outside capital" getting control of our utilities. Certainly the shares are for sale, and the buyers need not prove they are legal residents either of Boston or of any other part of New England. A resident of Houston or of Luling, Texas, would not be asked to establish legal residence here if he proposed to purchase or continue a great new textile or other plant. To ask him to do so would be almost universally regarded as ridiculous. Utility shares, whether in Massachusetts or any other State, will be owned by those willing to pay the most money for them. That is the legal outcome of it all.

Just now there was largely owned in New England shares in big New York and California public utilities. The New England money that invested is do doubt welcomed in both States.

The president of the Massachu-setts Utilities Investment Trust is Arthur H. Wellman. Vice-presidents are Elihu G. Loomis, Chauncey D. Parker and Bowen Waite. Trustees include numerous names exceedingly well known hereabouts. They are Charles H. Adams, Edwin H. Barker, A. Cleveland Bent, Edward L. Bennett, Joseph J. Bodell, Arthur E. Childs, Philip M. Childs, Channing H. Cox, Guy W. Cox, James J. Phelan, Arthur S. Pope, Elwyn G. Preston, Fred M. Rowell, Philip Stockton, Paul B. Webster, Myron L. Whitcomb, Frank A. Wymes, Charles L. Edgar, Merton E. Grush, Henry I. Harriman, George F. Howland, Charles E. Hull, Harold S. Lamont, Edward C. Mason, Samuel C. Moore and George W. Perry.

finally the local rediscount rates. Attorney-General Sargent has been appointed by a referee in the law, about which considerable honest doubt evidently exists, to find local bankers inclined to doubt that the clash will be carried beyond the ruling but better if a compromise and an effort will be made to have the incoming Congress amend the law to make it clearer.

LYTTON MAY REFEREE BIG QUARREL

Chicago, Sept. 12.—Sagacious clockers of pugilistic pulses have the tip out that the third man in the Tunney-Dempsey ring the night of September 22 will be a local business man of national acquaintance.

Guesses as to the identity of the Illinois State Athletic Commission's choice of referee are being cast wherever and whenever the ring-wise disciples of Queensberry open foregather in the loop.

Under the Illinois boxing law the name of the referee is withheld until the principals ankle up the aisles from their dressing rooms to test their make-ups with a leather massage.

In this respect the law here is similar to that in New York State, where the identity of a referee is such a State secret that not more than a million inhabitants are in the know.

According to Warren Brown, the local law provides that a referee be a bona fide resident of the State. Under this rule there now are four licensed arbiters who qualify for such a battle as the second and gallop between Tunney and Dempsey. They are:

Davy Miller, a man of much experience with the heavies; Joe Chip, veteran old-timer; Tommy Gardner, also a veteran of the ancient knuckle academy, and Dave Barry. Barry, it will be recalled as a second man and able to qualify, is Ed Purdy, first a Chicagoan, later a New Yorker, a referee of high quality and now again a resident of this city.

The man whose name keeps bobbing up in conversation as one who is not at all unlikely to be asked to take the responsible position is George Lytton, owner of the Hub store. Mr. Lytton, who is about forty-five years old, is a former amateur boxer who displayed unusual ring abilities.

He is regarded as an ideal type for the job. Himself a millionaire the position would be purely honor and glory. It is also hinted broadly that Rickard is willing to pass with $5,000 for a mistake-proof official of this light for a purse estimated at $3,000,000 and attended by 161,000 persons.

Flock of Tournaments For Golfers This Week

By BILL GRIMES

During this week seven tournaments will be played, and these events will bring into action every known type of golfer from newspaper divot diggers to left-handers.

The N. E. P. G. O. and the scribes will be in action today. The press are at Sandy Burr battling to qualify for the professional golfers association championships which will be played at Dallas, Texas, in December.

The New England allotment is only six, and therefore the struggle will be a keen one. Willie Ogg of Worcester, George Aulbach of the N. E. P. G. O. champion, Jock and Charles Hackney and Jimmy Gullen will be in the lucky ball dozen, out the heavy Sandy Burr course only upset the dope by allowing some long hitter to break in the selected six.

The Boston newspapermen's golf association will be the guest's of the Norfolk Gold Club today. As the scribes have always been rendered a hearty welcome by President Al Rydstrom and the members of the Dedham club, one of the largest turnouts of the season is expected.

SANDY BURR HOLDS FORTH.

Out at the Sandy Burr Country Club the qualifying round of the second annual New England left hand championship will be played tomorrow. President Gus White predicts that a larger and faster field than participated in the initial southpaw championship which Al Brainard of Cohasset won.

The Sixteen low scorers during the qualifying round will qualify for match play which will start Wednesday morning and the championship decided Thursday afternoon.

While the left-handers are playing their first and second round of match play Wednesday, the Oakley Country Club will be staging a mixed foursome tournament. As Oakley is a very popular layout with the women golfers a huge field is expected. It will be to the advantage of the contesting teams to get starting time from Caddy Master Ralph Noone and thereby avoid delay on the first tee.

WOMEN GET STARTED.

The Charles River Country Club is putting on a three-day open handicap medal play tournament, which will start on Thursday and continue through Saturday, while Salem and Wellesley will entertain the open golfers on Friday and Saturday.

This will be the first open tournament ever held at the Charles River Country Club, a course which bids fair to be the finest in this section within a few years, and should attract an exceptionally large entry.

The Women's Golf Association of Boston starts its Fall campaign on Thursday with a handicap medal play tournament at the Allbonacris Golf Club. Although Mrs. Edward H. Baker, Jr., of Oakley carried off the first Spring at Woodland, Mrs. W. C. Quimby has been traveling at such a fast pace this Summer that the Cape Cod rates matches that her success in these coming tournaments will be watched with keen interest.

NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and promote the peace of the world.
2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, but no State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defense.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
5. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st of January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January immediately following his election in November.

This and That

Put Them Together and They SEEM to Say New England Is "Getting Along"

The Postoffice Department in Washington makes public two tables of August receipts at postoffices in different sections of the country.

The first group is made up of fifty "selected" offices, generally in the larger cities.

In this group are SIX New England cities, Boston, Providence, Hartford, New Haven, Springfield and Worcester.

Of the fifty cities, only five show decreased postal receipts as compared with the corresponding month of 1926. These five are Kansas City, Buffalo, Dayton, Fort Worth and Jacksonville. BOSTON'S receipts were up $101,790.13.

The second group is made up of fifty "industrial" cities, which show an AVERAGE gain of 6.45 per cent.

How figures New England in THIS list?

Portland shows a gain of 17.74 per cent., Waterbury, Ct., a gain of 7.91 per cent. Manchester, N. H., her textile depression offset to some extent by the activity of her shoe factories, reports an increase in receipts amounting to $23,421.27; not up to the 6.45 per cent. average, but nevertheless a gain.

So much has been said about the trials and tribulations of "textiles" that there has been danger that New Englanders would forget the less well-known industries of the Six States. Information furnished by the Research Department of the New England Council in daily bulletins to the press calls attention to one after another of these "other" industries. Who knew, to take one example, that the paper-box industry of New England amounted to $31,000,000 in a single year and furnishes employment to 8,404 persons?

In nearby Watertown, the factories of the Hood Rubber Company are running "at capacity." The Hood company's sales of gum footwear are about 30 per cent. ahead of last year's business at the same time. The tire division has been operating three eight-hour shifts all Summer.

Failures in August, in the country at large, were fewer than the failures in July. Vice-President Buckland, of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, hopes the "day is not far distant when a reasonable portion of the earnings can be applied as a dividend upon the common stock."

Finally a cheerful word from Charles S. Hamlin, New England's only representative on the Federal Reserve Board:

"Credit was never more abundant. The United States is in splendid shape. The country over there has been a slight recession in business recently, but people are taking their breath, ready for the normal increase which comes with the Autumn."

"School---Drive Slowly"

Vacation Ended, the Signal Means What It Says

Just another word or two as the Safety Campaign gets under way.

First, to the motorist, to remind him that in Boston alone more than 20,000 children are GOING TO SCHOOL FOR THE FIRST TIME.

For the past nine or ten weeks, the roadside warning, "School—Slow Down," has signified little more than one of last year's circus bills. The time is here when it means all it ever meant. Watch out for these precious little folk, who are TOO little to watch out for themselves.

The PEDESTRIAN, too, should take notice.

Men and women who step out into the traffic in the middle of a city block are taking dreadful chances. They are almost as foolhardy as those young men who lift the protecting bars at a grade crossing, to rush across ahead of the approaching train.

GOVERNOR FULLER gives the pedestrian good advice: "Carefully choose safe moments and safe places for crossing or walking on highways."

The BEST way for the MOTORIST to begin this two weeks' campaign will be to have brakes and lights tested. At hundreds of service stations and repair shops throughout the State this will be done FREE. Registrar Goodwin has provided the repair men with stickers, testifying in effect that "the equipment of this car meets EVERY requirement of the law."

The co-operating repairman will attach one of these stickers to your car, when and if he can do so conscientiously. Take care that it is pasted somewhere else than on the windshield.

Better GET one of these stickers, for this safety campaign will be followed by a GOODWIN drive against those whose cars are NOT properly equipped.

Let the watchword be "co-operation." Not even the automobile menace can stand up against a co-operating Commonwealth.

Blondes

This Minister Is Unfair to Them

Rev. F. B. Loos, of Liberty, Mo., a strangely named town for his calling, has married 4,800 couples, and he says:

"The brunette is serious and seems to take a marriage ceremony in earnest, but the dumbest bride, who always seems to wonder what it is all about, is the blonde."

A queer paradox has often arisen in connection with blondes. People have been in the habit of calling them dumb, but they seem to be smart enough to capture desirable husbands. Some people are called dumb before all the returns are in.

As a matter of fact, a wife is what she turns out to be. Her complexion has nothing to do with it.

SAFETY FATAL TO MANY THINGS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

TWO heads are better than one—sometimes.

In the multitude of counsel there is wisdom—sometimes.

It is a good deal better to have a board arrive at a majority conclusion than it is to take the judgment of any one man—perhaps.

There is one kind of thing that is much better attended to by consulting all manner of people and getting the collective benefit of the opinion of various people, and there is another kind of thing that is ruined by this process.

In a recent interview Rupert Hughes said that one thing that is the matter with movies is that they are subjected to too much treatment or too many people. The managing director and several other people take the author's ideas to pieces and when they get through the original inspiration is all gone.

If you want a work of art you must let a man alone. He must be supreme arbiter in the field of creation. He cannot consult other people and must follow his own gleam.

The one thing that art needs, whether it is the writing of a poem or the making of a book or a picture is inspiration. It is the spark kindled in the author's bosom that awakens the spark in the audience. That sort of thing is ruined when you subject it to the criticism of anybody else.

The rule seems to be that when you want to accomplish a certain thing you must put it in the hands of a responsible person and then let him alone, or when action is to be taken that shall satisfy a number of parties, the matter is best decided by various council.

Some things are helped by boards and some are not. In many instances boards simply guarantee stupidity. About all they can assure is safety and to many things safety is fatal.

Nobody wants to see a safe work of art or to read a safe book. They want something daring and adventurous. What is safe may be good for us, but it is not interesting.

You can't compromise an inspiration nor a conviction.

It is well known that the most effective form of government is an absolute monarchy, ruled by some one person who does as he pleases. That is the best way to get things done as Mussolini has shown in Italy. The only trouble with the system is that you cannot always be sure of a czar who can be trusted.

Most of the successful instances of business and most of the careers of successful men have not been due to wise compromise, but to bold leadership.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

MASSACHUSETTS avenue in Cambridge presents a living example of what time does to any district. Years ago the avenue between Harvard and Forter Squares was a quiet, pleasant residential district. High priced physicians, dentists, bankers, attorneys and business men lived there. High ceilinged rooms with huge fireplaces and grand stair cases were in those mansions.

Today but few of these are standing. The old owners are in their graves and the houses have been pulled down and sold to second-hand dealers.

* * *

In their places have risen huge apartment houses, automobile display rooms, stores, restaurants and offices. When one old house was demolished a large collection of swords and sabers was found in a small secret room. The owner had been an antique sword collector and had died with his little secret unknown. Today these swords are scattered all over Greater Boston.

* * *

In those days trolley cars loaded with people rode out to Arlington and Lexington to get the alleged fresh air. Now they drive past the cars in smells of gasolined air.

* * *

One of the building wreckers came from Europe many years ago. He was clever enough to become a pioneer in this work. Today his fortune is reputed to be in seven figures.

* * *

A salesman of building materials told us he was studying a foreign language. He said it is easier for him to learn the other fellows' language so that when he goes to sell, his sales will be correct. Evidently he has given up all hopes of expecting the other fellow to learn English.

* * *

Down in the financial district is a group of brokers whose main operations deal with European markets. If the broker guesses correctly with respect to certain London sales he may earn several hundred dollars weekly. After sufficient experience he is either making himself rich or he is working in some other business.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I'M immensely diverted by young atheists.

They say there are thousands of them—bursting out like a rash all over the country—making speeches, publishing magazines, forming chapters in our colleges, all frantically determined to get rid of God.

They tickle me, those kinds, and I'm even more amused by the grown up people who take them seriously and want to pass laws against them. A smart business that would be! We might as well pass laws against spit balls.

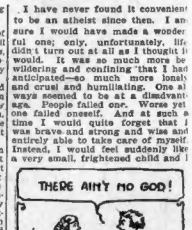
I remember so well when I was an atheist. I was all of eighteen and it was painfully apparent to my great brain that—Everything Was Wrong. This was undoubtedly due to the stupidity and hypocrisy of a lot of blundering old fat-heads, of which my immediate relations were horrible examples. If only I could show such adults up—better still, if I could show up the silly God in which they believed, and which they used as a screen for their pernicious practices, then maybe we'd get somewhere. That was the idea—To get rid of God! And I was the little Joan of Arc who would do it.

I cannot tell you how ruthless I felt when I had arrived at this decision. During most of my life I had been on friendly, even confidential terms with God. Undoubtedly, this exposure was going to be quite a smack to him. I couldn't help feeling sorry for the old thing. However, it had to be done. So one night I went out into the garden and told God He wasn't and that I was through with Him.

I remember distinctly looking up at the stars with a queer sickish feeling as I said it. I'm sure I expected almost anything to happen. But it didn't. Not even a mountain tumbled. This, I said, rather snappily, proves that God isn't. But inwardly I felt mortified. It is hard to be snubbed at eighteen.

For the next six weeks I was a furious atheist. I took a fiendish pleasure in telling certain pious, pink-nosed little girls that there was no God. They looked at me in horror—opening and shutting their mouths like sold fish. My family, however, laughed at me. I enjoyed my martyrdom keenly. But after a time, the sensation began to pall. And I surged into the next enthusiasm. I think I became a suffragette. Or dedicated myself to free love. Or began writing poetry. Or something.

I have never found it convenient to be an atheist since then. I am sure I would have made a wonderful one; only, unfortunately, life didn't turn out at all as I thought it would. It was so much more bewildering and confining than I had anticipated—so much more lonely and cruel and humiliating. One always seemed to be at a disadvantage. People failed one. Worse yet one failed oneself. And at such a time I would quite forget that I was brave and strong and wise and entirely able to take care of myself. Instead, I would feel suddenly like a very small, frightened child and I would find myself hanging on to something which I could not see nor understand nor explain, but which was infinitely comforting. And strangely enough, that Something to which I clung never seemed to bear a grudge because I had forsworn Him for six tremendous weeks.



That's why I'm not fretting about all these dreadful young squires who are trying to show God up. Honestly, I don't think it will bother God a bit. And you'll be surprised to see how soon these youngsters themselves will forget all about it.

The first time they hear the thin, heart-shaking wail of birth—

Or try so desperately to stay the ebbing eyes of death—

Or see their arrogant young pride all splintered at their feet—

They'll forget that they have told God that he isn't. They'll only know that they are clinging hard to something in the dark.
